Churchill 'Thankful'

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), May 1. Eighty per cent—or about 48,000 men—of the British Expeditionary Force sent to Greece has been safely removed from the German-conquered kingdom, it was announced early today amid indications that the evacuation is continuing despite German attacks.

Prime Minister Churchill told a cheering House of Commons yesterday that valiant rear-guard fighting against the Germans by a few thousand British imperials enabled 45,000 of the original 60,000 in the B. E. F. to escape from Greece by sea.

(In Cairo, the British Middle East command declared the British forces were withdrawn safely by sea, embarking from open beaches, under steady attack from Nazi airmen. The use of beaches was similar, on a miniature scale, to the great withdrawal from Dunkerque last June.

(Success of the difficult withdrawal operations, a communique said, must be attributed to the "great skill and devotion by all three arms of the service.")

The official announcement early today showed 3,000 more than Churchill accounted for had been withdrawn from Greece, leaving 9,000 British still unaccounted for—and the British hope to save more.

Invest in Defense, Roosevelt Urges in Opening Bond Drive

Appeals to Nation to Put Savings To Work to Pay for Arms Program

President Roosevelt last night launched the Nation-wide sale of Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps by buying the first bond for Mrs. Roosevelt and the first stamps for his ten grandchildren, and then urging the country to make similar investments in America's future.

"Fellow Americans, I ask you to demonstrate again your faith in America by joining me in investing in the new Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps," the President appealed in a national broadcast address.

He made a "frank and clear appeal for financial support" to pay for the giant defense program and "for the American existence of later generations."

The securities, in denominations from 25 cents to $10,000, go on sale today at 16,000 postoffices.

The President pictured the sale of the securities as a "privilege and an opportunity" for Americans to share in the Nation's defense effort.

Sale of the securities, he said, opens up a "great partnership" between the Government and the people in a time of peril.

The sales campaign is a "national and homey" event at the same time, the President asserted, dramatizing this remark by disclosing that he was buying the first bonds and stamps for members of his family.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who also appeared on the radio program, said the program gives every American a chance "to

Nazis Massing For Sudden Attack on Suez

Weygand's Forces May Be Involved, Officials Here Say

By Bertram D. Hulen

Germany is reinforcing strongly her forces in North Africa, according to reports received in Washington.

The movement is of sufficient strength to lead to conjectures in official circles as to whether the next Nazi movement may not be concurrent drives toward Suez and westward toward the Atlantic. In that event the status of Gen. Weygand's French force in North Africa might be involved.

The drive on Suez, it is felt, may be in the familiar pincers pattern of a forward thrust from the present Nazi position on the Egyptian border and on the other side along the coasts of Syria and Palestine.

[Such a drive is likely within ten days, London military circles said last night, according to an Associated Press dispatch. These reports said Adolf Hitler has ordered a "grand scale attack" with instructions to the high command to disregard casualties in attaining the objectives.]

Reports received in Washington show that already the German forces are jumping like fleas from island to island in the Aegean

Russia Moving 25 Divisions In War Threat

Troops Are Massed On Polish Rivers To Counter Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, April 30.—Russia is reported here to be taking extensive steps for the immediate bolstering of already strong forces in the Ukraine, Poland and Estonia in preparation for a worsening of Russo-German relations in the near future, which might even lead to war.

These measures are understood to include the rushing of another 25 divisions to join the reported 40 already strung along the Dniester and Pruth Rivers from Lwow to Odessa. In the same region the Russians had recently amassed so much aviation material that it is reported a German demarche was made in Moscow to ascertain the reason.

The inquirer was informed that between 600 and 700 first-line bombers and a respectable number of pursuit ships located there were for the purpose of "spraying the wheat crops this spring."

Many Poles Won Over

In Estonia it is understood no attempts are being made to conceal the defensive preparations of Russian long-range artillery on the southern shores of the Gulf of Finland. With an approximate 20 divisions in the neighborhood, the Russian high command is understood to be moving another 15 to 20 divisions to protect its newly acquired "sphere of influence" of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

Meanwhile, in the seized Polish territory the Russians are understood to have won over "a considerable number" of the conquered Poles in Russian-occupied territory, who have reportedly joined the Russian ranks in the hopes of getting revenge for the German assault

Neatest Trick of the War

British Submarine, Envoy Play Hide-and-Seek With Italians

By International News Service

London, April 30.—A farcical game of hide-and-seek, involving a British submarine, a British ambassador and the Italian army and navy, was played around the Fascist-held Yugoslavian harbor of Kotor for 9 hours on the day Yugoslavia fell, the Admiralty disclosed tonight.

H. M. S. Submarine Regent, in search of Sir Ronald Ian Campbell, British ambassador to Yugoslavia, and his staff, entered the harbor at dawn on April 26 to find the port occupied by the Italians. Nevertheless the Regent landed and a call was paid on the senior naval officer.

He sent an Italian army officer out to the Regent as hostage while a British landing party searched for Campbell.

Meanwhile, the Regent lay in the harbor "wearing" a huge white ensign. She was surrounded by a large force of the Italian army as what the admiralty called a "tense farcical situation" continued.

Nine hours passed, and two Italian dive-bombers, spewing bombs and machine-gun bullets, dived out of the sky in an attack which slightly injured the Regent's commanding officer and one of her petty officers.

The commanding officer decided then was the time to leave. The Regent dived and left the harbor through two minefields, which it successfully negotiated, finally returning through the Adriatic to its base—with the Italian army officer still aboard.

No mention was made of the landing party. A Rome dispatch today, however, said Sir Ronald was on his way there.

U. S., Britain Held Leading Axis in Planes

American Output 'Mushrooming Daily,' To Hit 18,000 in '41, Jouett Tells Chamber

Half of America's production of war planes, coupled with Britain's output, exceeds the plane production of the Axis powers, Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, disclosed yesterday.

Col. Jouett, speaking at the twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said that 18,000 military planes will be turned out in this country in 1941, and that nearly double that number—30,000—will be produced in 1942.

American planes, he said, already had taken part in the fighting over England, in Africa, over the Mediterranean, in Greece, and over the Atlantic. Production, he said, was "mushrooming daily."

"America, within a short time," he continued, "will see American warcraft rolling through factory doors, swarming through the skies in astonishing numbers. On behalf of the aircraft industry, I guarantee it! . . .

"Even now, half our output, coupled with the British output, exceeds Axis plane production, according to best obtainable estimates.

Planes "Equal or Surpass the Best"

"The planes we are building and will build equal or surpass the best being built, or to be built, elsewhere. We hear much about new German types about to enter the war arena . . . But our people are engaged on new models, too. They are military secrets, of course, but I can tell you that there are at least 16.

"I can say that interceptors to combat night bombing—one form of attack which Britain has been unable to repel up until now—are being developed in the United States. Rest assured that our planes will not be excelled. We must build the best. An inferior warplane is worse than no plane at all."

Col. Jouett urged that every source of suitable sub-contracting be used in plane production. He said that there were 28,000 industrial establishments holding no defense orders. These, he said, should

Tobey and Nye Measures Voted Down 6 Times By Senate Group

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Blocked in six separate votes by the Foreign Relations Committee, Senate isolationists last night decided to carry their fight to ban convoys to the Senate floor.

By votes of 10 to 13 and 9 to 14, Administration forces beat down in committee every move to hold hearings or to report in any form the Tobey and Nye anti-convoy resolutions.

Informal surveys by Administration Senators indicated either motion would be similarly defeated in any forced vote in the Senate.

"If there were no other reasons against favorable action on the proposed (Tobey) resolution," Secretary of State Hull had written the committee, "it is manifest that its passage would be misunderstood abroad.

"My recommendation, therefore, is against the passage of the resolution."

Would Weaken Executive

Chairman George, who read the Hull letter to the committee, later told reporters the resolutions in the opinion of the committee majority would weaken the head of the executive branch "in this crisis."

"In my judgment, the resolutions would compel us to abandon the whole doctrine of freedom of the seas," the chairman said.

George reiterated his belief that President Roosevelt "certainly will come to Congress" before undertaking to convoy goods to belligerent zones. In his own opinion, he said convoys would be "a limited form of warfare."

"While the Presidents as commander in chief of the Navy may use the Navy to protect life or property of American citizens or protect the vital interests of the United States on the high seas, the authority does not exist to use the Navy for other affirmative acts," the chairman said.

"I opposed the resolutions because I believe the President will come to Congress before any convoying is undertaken."

Wants Vote for Record

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, author of one of the two pending anticonvoy measures, appeared before the committee in support of his resolution. After its defeat, he said his fight will go on.

"The resolution will be brought up in the Senate and a record vote will

Marlene Wins $95,000 Dispute

MARLENE DIETRICH

By the Associated Press

Marlene Dietrich, film actress, and her husband, Rudolph Sieber, yesterday won a $95,000 income tax argument with the United States Treasury.

The Treasury disclosed that not only did it drop claims that the couple underpaid their 1936 and 1937 income taxes by $71,000, but admitted that instead Marlene overpaid by $23,952. She was given a credit for that amount against any taxes she owed for subsequent years.

Details of the disagreement were not revealed.

Agreement To Open Coal Mines Today

Fuel for Defense Needs to Flow After Month's Shutdown

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A month to the day since their initial shutdown, the Nation's soft coal mines today again will disgorge vitally needed fuel for defense, following a temporary agreement signed yesterday by C. I. O. United Mine Workers and representatives of Southern collieries.

The agreement, reached only after four weeks of trouble-filled negotiations and a final eleventh-hour snag which cost an extra 24 hours of idleness, is expected to result in the opening today of at least two-thirds of the Southern mines, with the rest following as soon as possible. Meantime, about half of the Northern mines opened yesterday, with the remainder expected to be in full production today.

Terms of the agreement, announced in a joint statement of John L. Lewis, U. M. W. president, and L. T. Putman, spokesman of the Southern producers, following the lines of a proposal made ten days ago by President Roosevelt, provide for a $1-a-day wage increase, from $5.60 to $6.60, and for negotiations to continue for further wage in-

About 225 Vessels to Help Move War Materials Now Piling Up at U. S. Ports and To Save Britain's 'Life Line'

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night ordered that 2,000,000 tons of cargo shipping—equal to more than one-quarter of America's merchant fleet—be immediately put into war service for "all out aid to the democracies."

The dramatic move was officially construed as the President's answer for the present to British pleas for more help in winning the Battle of the Atlantic.

Some of the ships will be transferred to foreign flags—possibly British—so that they can sail into torpedo-infested war zones to maintain the British "lifeline," the President revealed.

Vessels remaining under the American flag will be reallocated "to make every cargo directly or indirectly useful to our defense efforts and the winning by the democracies of the battle now being waged in the Atlantic."

Couched in a brief letter from Mr. Roosevelt to Chairman Land, of the Maritime Commission, the announcement followed a reminder by the President Tuesday that he has power to send warships into combat zones and was a sequel to his declaration that neutrality patrols will extend as far in the seven seas as this hemisphere's safety requires.

Officials said that the President's order apparently marked a successful conclusion to the visit here of Sir Arthur Salter, British shipping authority, sent here by his government to discuss problems created by Nazi U-boat and bomber warfare in the Atlantic.

War Materials Pile Up at Ports

The President called at the same time for more speed in the Nation's program of building 412 emergency cargo ships, telling Land that "our merchant fleet must be expanded faster than we had planned."

It was estimated that about 225 ships would have to be ordered into the "war pool" to furnish the 2,000,000 tons the President asked Land to supply.

Recognizing that creation of the "pool" would cause hardship among shippers, the President wrote that he was nevertheless sure that they would "gladly cooperate."

"I realize fully that to get cargo and refrigerated ships and tankers diverted from their existing or proposed routes will cause not only great inconvenience but the loss of trade and sacrifices by the consuming public," the President's letter said.

"But vital war materials are piling up at the ports or are delayed at the factories. We must supply those ships at once. I am sure the owners of our ships will gladly cooperate in this essential enterprise."

No possible source of securing the tonnage will be overlooked, Land indicated earlier in a speech to the United States Chamber of Commerce.

He outlined the following eight potential sources of merchant tonnage:

Domestic shipping.
Intercoastal trade.
Army and Navy auxiliaries.
Foreign flag shipping tied up in United States ports. (A bill now pending in Congress would give the President authority to buy the 160 foreign flag ships that are here. The Government recently seized 30 German and Italian vessels and placed 39 Danish carriers under "protective custody."
Remnants of the old reserve fleet. Officials believed 10 or 12 ships could be furnished from this source.
Ships now in foreign commerce.
New construction.

Sweeping Order Marks End of a Phase

In line with a request by the President, the Maritime Commission immediately assigned an experienced shipping official to give full time to diverting the large tonnage pool to defense and war service. The man chosen was H. Harris Robson, vice president of the United Fruit Lines, who has been for several months the director of the Commission's division of Emergency Shipping. Robson is a former officer of the Australian navy.

The Government has ample power to enforce the President's order, and expects to get more, officials said.

Existing laws give the Government authority to requisition any ship for emergency use, which is a powerful influence in securing full cooperation from shipowners.

Scheduled for consideration by the House next week is an Administration bill giving the Government authority to buy or charter any American ship or any foreign ship in United States harbors.

Transfers of United States vessels to the British flag under the President's direction would not be a new step, officials pointed out.

Since the start of the war in September, 1939, about 200 craft have been transferred to Great Britain and her allies. Most of them are now in British hands.

The President's sweeping order marked the end of one phase of American help in solving Britain's need for merchant tonnage, a phase during which the British were allowed to acquire tonnage piecemeal from various sources without formal coordination.

The British have bought more than a score of vessels at auction from the laid-up United States fleet of World War days, they purchased other privately and placed orders here for construction of 60 new cargo carriers.

The President's letter to Land was interpreted as wiping out that

Further Revision Expected

Capital Draft Quota Boosted; 2,850 to Be Called in May, June

In a revision of Selective Service quotas throughout the Nation, the War Department yesterday increased the Washington total for induction by June 30 from 3,982 to 5,642.

The change of State and corps area figures follows corrected tabulations for men in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps on the basis of which "credits" are deducted from Selective Service quotas.

Further revision of State lists will occur as the census of the growing armed forces continues. As the quotas now stand, 2,850 must be available for induction by June 30.

The new 5,642 total here includes 3,763 white registrants and 1,879 colored. Since only 2,615 white and 1,071 colored men are expected to be in uniform by May 23, 1,956 must be available for induction from the Capital between May 23 and end of the fiscal year, June 30.

Selection heads said, however, that not all of this number, far greater than that yet called in a like period of time, need actually be inducted. While the number must be available, housing and other factors may prevent immediate induction of so large a contingent.

Quotas for Maryland and Virginia were revised as follows: Maryland's was raised from 12,582 to 13,175, while that of the Old Dominion was increased from 9,747 to 14,164.

To supply at least 1,956 men for induction in June, District Selective Service headquarters plans to order up nearly 3,500 Washingtonians for physical examinations in May. An average of 550 registrants will be examined at local hospitals on the following dates: May 6, 12, 15, 19, 22 and 26.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Navy Knox announced the First and Second Divisions of the District Naval Reserve Battalion, numbering 100 men each, will go into active service in May. The Third Division already is on duty at the Panama Canal Zone and at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu.

The local reservists will go to sea at the same time as 45 divisions, comprising 230 officers and 4,600 men, over the country, are called out for service aboard auxiliary ships and naval district vessels.

Selection officials said that a part of the heavy 1,956 June quota might be filled from among the 1,500 student registrants, deferred until the end of their academic year.

The local selection headquarters announced a breakdown of the contingent called to the colors May 21-23, inclusive. It follows:

Golf Links May Meade Change

Have Influenced Costing Million

Chairman Truman declared yesterday that testimony before the Senate Defense Investigating Committee had left the "inference" that the location of a new hospital at Fort George G. Meade, Md., was changed at an additional cost of $1,000,000 "to save the post golf course."

The Senator made the statement during the committee's inquiry into reasons for the cost of the new cantonment being more than double original estimates. Rising labor and material costs, bad weather, changes in plans, and emphasis on speed rather than economy have also been given as reasons for the additional cost.

Earlier, Maj. James Noxon, constructing quartermaster at Fort Meade, testified that he had agreed with an engineering firm employed to survey the camp site that the hospital should have been placed adjacent to the post air field. Construction costs would have been much less there, he said.

Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, then commander of the Third Corps Area and now retired, testified Tuesday that he had directed a change in the site for the hospital and the remainder of the cantonment after making his own personal survey.

Asked about the part the golf course played in the decision, Parsons said he had built it and was proud of it, but that he had ordered the site shifted to afford more room for training troops in the limited area of the Meade reservation.

Truman asked Col. Leslie R. Groves, who inspected the site for the War Department, whether in his opinion the golf course had influenced the final selection. Groves be taken," Tobey said in his statement. "Then the people will know which of their Senators are willing to disregard the will of the people on a matter which means life and death to the people."

Tobey did not say how he would attempt to force a vote, but Majority Leader Barkley recently challenged him to move to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee, automatically placing his measure before the Senate.

Tobey, Nye and other noninterventionists might also try to attach their resolutions as riders on other bills, possibly on the measure to take over idle foreign ships.

Appraisals for the Administration of the resolution's strength in the Senate were reliably said to show that at the present time on a motion to discharge the committee they could not muster more than 35 or 36 votes and in whatever form presented could be defeated.

In yesterday's committee test, a motion by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to report the Tobey resolution favorably was defeated, 10 to 13.

Voting to report it were Senators Van Nuys, Reynolds, Gillette and Clark (Democrats), and Johnson, Capper, Vandenberg, Shipstead and Nye (Republicans), and La Follette (Progressive)—10.

Voting against a favorable report were Senators George, Harrison (by proxy), Wagner (by proxy), Connally, Thomas of Utah, Murray, Pepper, Green, Barkley, Guffey, Glass and Byrnes (Democrats) and White (Republican)—13.

The committee refused to report the Nye resolution by an identical count, after declining viva voce Nye's request for hearings. Barkley himself moved to report the Nye resolution in order to get action, then voted with the majority against it.

The vote against reporting the Tobey resolution without recommendation was likewise 10 to 13.

The vote against reporting the Tobey resolution "adversely" showed the same line-up, except Van Nuys shifted to the majority to make the result 14 to 9.

The count against hearings on the Tobey resolution was the same, except Harrison's proxy was not voted. Gillette and Van Nuys voted with the majority, and White with the minority, making the result 9 to 13.

'You Don't Like Me Any More,' Gen. Johnson Tells Roosevelt

Hugh S. Johnson, who participated prominently in running the World War draft and more recently headed the defunct National Recovery Administration, lost his commission as a reserve brigadier general yesterday, but not his right of free speech nor his gift for using it.

A White House announcement that the commission held by Johnson, who is 58, would not be renewed, and that no question of personalities was involved, brought from the sharp-tongued columnist and former active Army officer a torrent of salty language, and the disclosure that he recently wrote to Mr. Roosevelt: "I am sure that you do not like me any more—and I don't blame you."

Johnson has criticized foreign and some other policies of the Administration.

In the face of a War Department recommendation that Johnson's commission be renewed for a fourth five-year term, President Roosevelt decided to turn down the request, said Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary.

General in Bad Spirits

Early said the action was taken in line with a policy of reappointing only those officers whose active service is contemplated and that it was not planned to place Johnson on active service for reasons connected with his age and physical condition.

In a none too pleasant mood, Johnson called a press conference and questioned the "misleading, so-called reasons" for the White House action.

Saying he had no more right to demand a reappointment than a man "had to be consecrated as a bishop," Johnson said it was nonetheless his duty to correct any implications that he was physically unfit.

"How can that he said?" he asked. "Both physical and mental examinations were waived by the War Department. There is no necessity for physical examination until a call for active service. Neither Mr. Early nor anyone else has a right to say, in the absence of a physical examination, that I am physically unfit."

"Another is that the War Department did not want or intend to call me. I have had more personal and actual experience in industrial and manpower mobilization than any officer I know. I have been repeatedly told by the War Department officials that my name was near the top of the list to be called on these specialties."

Correspondence Made Public

Early and Johnson released correspondence between the columnist and the White House.

Johnson's letter to his old chief, the President, said his only important physical disability might be overweight.

Johnson said a call to active duty would be "a serious problem to me," and that "I have the reverse of any selfish interest in seeking reappointment."

"I am sure that you don't like me any more and I don't blame you," said Johnson's letter to the President. "But I am equally sure that you know in your heart, more confidently, perhaps, than about some other people that in whatever you might ask me to do, I would serve you faithfully and loyally—as I have always done."

Johnson added in a postscript:

"May I emphasize again that it seems to me that I am not here asking for any favor for myself, and to recall that throughout our entire association I never did."

Referred to Watson

The entire matter was referred to Gen. E. M. Watson, the President's military aide, who replied in a letter, parts of which Early made public.

Stressing that the President wanted it known that "personalities" played no part in nonrenewal of the commission, Watson told Johnson:

"The President feels very strongly that in the present emergency reappointment of general officers who are eligible by age to perform active service should be restricted to those whose appointment on such service is anticipated, and that only after the physical fitness of the officer has been investigated to the satisfaction of the Army medical authorities."

No More Ship Transfers, Knox Declares

The American Navy needs every ship it has afloat at this time and contemplates no further transfers to Great Britain, Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, said at a press conference yesterday.

He said, howver, that small craft of the torpedo-boat type will be supplied out of new construction for Britain. A request for 24 such speedy small craft is expected "hourly" from the British government, it was added by Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships.

Secretary Knox declined to reply to a question whether maintenance of the status quo of the fleet is due to implications of vital need by this country for its defense forces, but he added:

"Everybody in this room is thoroughly familiar with the fact that there is a possibility of war. There is always a possibility of war. I am not commenting on its imminence."

This statement was made after the Secretary and Admiral Robinson had reviewed comprehensively additions being made to the fleet and its activities.

Design Change Asked

Incidentally, Admiral Robinson revealed that British insistence upon changes in design of the new batch of 24 torpedo boats, to supplement 20 boats already dispatched under the lease-lend program, will seriously delay delivery of the new quantity. This country could easily build and deliver 24 of its own type within 12 months, Admiral Robinson said, but the British specifications will require retooling and redesigning that will delay delivery considerably longer.

Secretary Knox issued a statement at the start of his conference in which he denounced the "misunderstanding" created by counting new ships only in the number of keels laid.

"The building of the greatest naval force in the world," he said, "is setting up new records for speed and coordination."

As demonstrating the progress made in the naval building program, he said the Mare Island Navy Yard, in California, is so far ahead of its original schedule that it has been allocated the building of two new submarines to cost $6,083,000 each. The yard, he said, is from two months to a year ahead of its various building schedules. Seven submarines now are under construction there.

The conversion of ships from merchantmen to specialist vessels serving the fleet has not progressed as fast as it was hoped, Admiral Robinson said, largely because of unforeseen problems in the training of personnel to do this work.

Absorption of major Coast Guard units by the Navy, Knox said, is now in the "negotiating" stage, to work out details with the Treasury Department. He indicated that the Navy would like to take over the Coast Guard's heavier vessels, those exceeding 165 feet in length, and particularly seven new ocean-going patrol cutters, known as the Hamilton class.

Shipping aid to Britain, it appeared, will now be handled on a lend-lease basis, in the same "all out" manner that applies to transfers of munitions and aircraft.

Speaking to the Chamber of Commerce, Land reported that British shipping losses were now being incurred at the rate of 5,550,000 tons a year.

He said that the Maritime Commission was working on plans for supplying 200,000 tons of shipping a month "for defense purposes." The President's letter, released later, explained this reference.

The prelude to the President's announcement was a conference he held at the White House with Land and Harry L. Hopkins, lease-lend administrator.

In the afternoon, the President met with his highest policy advisers, the so-called "War Cabinet," composed of the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War and Navy and Hopkins.

The subject of their conference was not disclosed.

The President wrote to Land:

"As part of the defense effort to which this country is committed I wish you at the earliest possible moment to secure the service of at least 2,000,000 tons of merchant shipping which now exists and plan the operation thereof in such a manner as will make their cargo space immediately effective in accomplishing our objective of all-out aid to the democracies."

The President said the program fell into two parts:

1. "Utilization in routes to the combat zone of foreign ships or ships which are to be transferred to foreign registry."

2. Reallocation of American ships to best serve defense and British needs.

Iraq Balks British

Vichy, April 30 (AP).—British and Iraq authorities are disagreeing over landing of new British troop contingents at Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf, according to dispatches tonight from Bagdad, via Beirut, Lebanon.

These advices said the Iraq government had objected to further debarkation of Indian forces until after units already landed April 17-18 had been moved across the country.

have a financial stake in American democracy."

He said that, in addition, the Government wants to encourage habits of thrift and also wants to help provide "cushion" against the postwar period when "inevitably, readjustments of employment will have to be made."

Morgenthau promised that in connection with sale of the securities there would be no "drive," no quotas and no hysteria.

Postmaster General Frank Walker, who spoke from Des Moines, Iowa, explained that 18,000 postoffices would offer the stamps and bonds for sale and would also be supplied with explanatory literature.

The bonds are available in denominations from $25 to $1,000, sold with interest discounted in advance; and in two series of larger bonds in denominations from $1,000 to $10,000.

As the greatest investment program since the World War was being launched, Congress heard a suggestion for an "easy payment" plan to help small taxpayers save up for big taxes.

Representative Harry Sauthoff (Republican), Wisconsin, proposed that the Government sell, through postoffices, revenue stamps in $1, $3 and $5 denominations. He said taxpayers could purchase these stamps at their convenience and turn them in in lieu of cash when tax payments fall due.

Sauthoff said the proposal would avoid payment of a lump sum on March 15 which, he declared, was a "burden" on many taxpayers in the lower income brackets.

Sauthoff also called for "substantial levies" on radio stations and restriction of second-class postage subsidies.

Sauthoff was a witness before the House Ways and Means Committee, considering the Treasury's plan to raise $3,600,000,000 in new taxes.

Committee Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, announced that Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, will testify next Wednesday relative to possible effects of the revenue program on wages, prices and inflationary tendencies.

Announcement also was made that President Roosevelt has written Speaker Rayburn asking that Congress extend for two years his authority to regulate the gold content of the dollar and renewing the life of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund for a similar period.

John L. Sullivan, Assistant Treasury Secretary, said he would submit to the Ways and Means Committee tomorrow the Treasury plan for revising the excess profits tax.

who had said he considered the first site satisfactory, replied:

"I have no opinion, but I'm no golfer and as far as I'm concerned the hospital could have been placed right in the middle of the golf course."

John A. Stalfort, president of the Consolidated Engineering Co. of Baltimore, which built the cantonment, testified that the company will receive a fee of about $275,000 for the job. After nonreimbursable expenses are deducted, they will have a profit of about $200,000, he said, before deducting general overhead.

Hugh Fulton, committee counsel, brought out that the company's average annual net profit from 1936 and 1939 was $110,000. Stalfort also said that the company will divide a fee of $450,000 with a co-contractor for building a naval air base in Puerto Rico.

Lieut. Col. A. R. Wilson said there will be 25,918 men in the cantonment at Meade by June 30. The camp can be enlarged to house 33,000 men at a cost of $2,000,000, it was said. This was made possible by building mess halls and hospital and other facilities for a force of this size, and leaving room for a third barrack building or each company.

31 Warships Lost

Vichy, April 30 (AP).—The newspaper Paris Soir said today that France has lost 31 warships of her fleet since the war began, including nine in the removal of British and French troops from Dunkerque.

Turkish Press Reaffirms Tie With Britain

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, April 29 (Delayed)—While scolding Britain for its failure to supply Greece with adequate assistance, the Turkish press stoutly affirmed this nation's friendships with the Allies today and said that any German threat to Turkey's independence would mean war.

"We are loyal to our alliance with England," declared the influential Aksam in an editorial entitled "Will Turkey Be Forced to Enter the War?"

"Nothing will change this, because we cherish the belief that such is best for the national good. We are ready and believe in our strength. Any demand concerning our independence will force Turkey into war."

Alarmed by Isle Seizure

The newspaper Vakit noted, with alarm the German occupation of Greek islands in the Aegean Sea, declaring that "if the British navy doesn't interfere even Crete will be taken."

"For Turkey, the invasion of these islands is of life and death importance, because it is not impossible that the forces which gather here might attack Turkey," the paper added. "That should not be possible while the British navy is in the Mediterranean, but the Turkish people must remember all possibilities and recall what happened to Norway."

"Points we don't understand," complained an editorial in Yeni Sabah: "Why the British do not bomb Rumanian oil fields; why repeated attacks on the German cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst apparently are unsuccessful; how a large German army was transported safely to Africa when the British are masters of the sea?"

There had been some points in the course of the war which made England's allies "doubt if the war is following an altogether wise leadership," said the Yeni Sabah. "We have no doubt of the final victory, but just as there is some discontent in England, we too are discontented."

Britain Criticized

Particular fault was found with the fact that Britain sent only a comparatively small force to Greece, when "two years had passed since Britain recognized Greece's danger and promised her help."

It is no help, the paper added, for Britain to explain that her forces in Egypt also were small.

"It's an added fault," the editorial declared. "When England promises help to a nation she places herself under a great obligation which she must discharge in a manner worthy of England. England must convince everyone that the term 'all possible aid' means something."

The British high command must drain off the surplus troops from England and employ them elsewhere, said the paper Kidam. "Had this been done the Balkans would not have been lost and Egypt would not have been attacked a second time."

Pianist Sues for $1,000,000, Charging She Was Sterilized

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JEANNETTE SCOTT SEYMOUR YOUNG

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, April 30.—Suit for $1,000,000 damages has been filed against Ralph Maxwell Lewis and others by Jeannette Scott Seymour Young, 27-year-old concert pianist, who charged they had her confined in a State insane hospital and forced her to undergo a sterilization operation.

Miss Young's complaint asserted she became engaged to Lewis, whom it identified as president of the Rosicrucian Order, after he represented he was unmarried and a member of the Caucasian race.

When she learned he was already married and was not a Caucasian, and threatened legal action, the complaint charged, Lewis conspired with Mrs. Lee Sackman Holmes, Herchel H. Holmes, Mrs. Gertrude Hand and other defendants, to have her placed in the Norwalk State Hospital on a "perjured affidavit."

Through bribery of State officers and attaches of the hospital, it alleged, the sterilization operation was performed there without her consent January 12, 1935.

Miss Young charged that as a result her hearing became greatly impaired and she was forced to abandon her musical career, losing earnings of $3,000 to $5,000 a year.

Miss Young says she is the daughter of the late Robert Seymour Young pioneer Seattle legislator.

Baron Von Werra Has Reached Reich, Peru Hears

Lima, Peru, April 30 (U.P.).—Baron Franz von Werra, the German aviator who escaped from a prison camp in Canada and later disappeared from the United States, skipping $10,000 bail, has reached Germany, according to German circles here.

The newspaper La Cronica said that Von Werra reached Lima, remained here four days, and then went to La Paz, Bolivia.

British Halt U. S. Liner, Seize 4 Nazis

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, April 30.—The Canadian auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert stopped the American President Lines ship President Garfield on the high seas on Tuesday and removed four German aviators, Capt. John E. Murphy of the United States ship, radioed today.

The four fliers took passage at San Francisco and were en route to their homeland via the Orient.

A terse report of the incident was given by Capt. Murphy to the ship's agents a few hours before the President Garfield put into port.

A naval party from the Prince Robert boarded the American ship, examined the passenger list and removed the four Germans, the report stated. The American ship was delayed less than an hour.

The quartet taken off were Ewald Flesch, 34; Werner Naumar, Hans Sandkamm and Guenther Katzke, 41.

They were taken in custody by the Immigration Service on their arrival in the United States last August from Colombia, where they had been employed by a commercial air service.

The Japanese steamship line, Nippon Yushen Kaisha, had refused to transport them across the Pacific.

(Japanese steamship lines have refused to carry German nationals of military age since a British warship stopped and boarded the liner Asma Maru in the Pacific last year and removed a number of young Germans.)

(Staff members of the British Consulate at San Francisco said the Germans left the United States without contacting representatives of Great Britain. They added that the men were "not in the same classification as German invalids and men of nonmilitary age" who previously had been accorded safe passage across the Pacific.)

R.A.F. Showers Superbombs On Mannheim

By the Associated Press

London, April 30.—Britain's air ministry announced new "superbomb" blows at Mannheim and successful forays by American-made bombers on Nazi continental bases tonight while the old British port of Plymouth dug itself out from the ruins of yet another furious air attack.

The Nazi's four-hour blasting of Plymouth was the fifth heavy raid this once-flourishing seaport has endured in the last eight nights, and the government expressed fear that many were killed. Other places in southwest and southern England and Wales were hit.

Eight raiders were brought down in the overnight attacks, British claimed, and meanwhile R. A. F. bombers carried fire and destruction into Germany, where thousands of incendiaries and high explosive bombs—including many of the new superbombs — were dropped on Mannheim, important Rhineland industrial center. Large fires were reported.

Oil stores at Rotterdam also were attacked by R. A. F. bombers, and the air ministry said American-built Havoc planes carried out successful attacks against three airdromes in northern France.

At one base, the ministry reported, a stick of high explosive and incendiary bombs was seen bursting on an airdrome just as three German aircraft were about to land and two others were taxiing across the field. One Nazi fighter was reported shot down attempting to engage a Havoc.

At another base a Havoc bomber surprised a number of German planes landing in a flare-lighted path, with undisclosed results, and at the third base a Havoc bombed a flare-path and then shot down a Messerschmitt.

(The Havoc is a douglas DB-7 light bomber, equipped for night fighting; it is also known in England as the "Douglas Boston.")

Tokyo Spokesman Hints Matsuoka May Visit U. S.

Tokyo, April 30.—The proposal that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka visit the United States in an effort to ease the tension in the Pacific received official cognizance today when Koh Ishii, spokesman of the cabinet board of information, told correspondents at a press conference today that he will approach the foreign minister himself with a view to ascertaining whether the latter is willing to make a statement on that question.

British Save 43,000 Men From Greece

Thermopylae, Churchill said, but added:

"This was a very small part of the losses inflicted on the Germans, who on several occasions—sometimes for two days at a time—were brought to a standstill by forces one-fifth their number."

"Painful as are our losses," Churchill said solemnly, "we have much to be thankful for and the empire forces have much to be proud of."

In giving the first official news of the fate of the British troops, Churchill acknowledged that heavy British equipment was left behind, just as it had been in the retreat from Dunkerque a year ago.

A reliable source said, however, that the British leaving Greece saved large amounts of small arms and Bren guns, and added that the German casualties were so heavy that Sofia, Bulgaria, was now a "hospital town."

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden displayed anxiety over German intentions in French Morocco.

Eden said the government was aware of the "dangers of German infiltration of North Africa and has tried to open the eyes of the French government to the danger this presents to them."

His latest information showed the number of Germans on the armistice commission in French Morocco had been increased to about 200, and, Eden said, "there is evidence of the recent entry of a number of German nationals and the continuation of German propaganda" in the Spanish territory.

Churchill said he gave his information on the Greek withdrawal because of the "extravagant claims made by the enemy."

"Up to the time when evacuation was seen to be inevitable, he said, "we had landed about 60,000 men in Greece, including one New Zealand and one Australian division.

"Considering that our airforce was, through superiority of the enemy force, compelled to leave the air fields from which it could alone effectively cover the retreat of our troops, and that only a small portion could be used to cover the points of embarkation, this must be considered remarkable.

"The conduct of our troops, and especially the rear guard, in fighting their way so many miles to the sea merits the highest praise.

"It is the first instance where air bombing prolonged day after day has failed to break the discipline and order of marching columns who, besides being thus assailed from the air, were pursued by no less than three German armored divisions as well as the whole strength of the German mechanized forces which could be brought to bear."

on their territory.

The fact that a large percentage of these Russian reinforcements consist of crack regiments drawn from the Far East has led to speculation here as to the extent of the recently ratified Russo-Japanese pact of nonaggression.

Most quarters here feel that it provided a welcome escape for the Japanese government, whose foreign minister during his stay in Europe was a witness of several Axis rebuffs.

Rusia's concentration of the main reinforcements in the south, however, is interpreted as an omen of the gravity with which the Soviet regards the German occupation of Lemnos and Samothrace following the collapse of Greek resistance.

It shows the importance the Russian high command attaches to the possibility of Germany reemploying the famous "Hoffman plan" used so successfully by Gens. Hoffman and Von Mackensen in 1917 against the Russians.

That plan envisaged an enveloping operation of the Russian armies in the Ukraine by simultaneous pushes from the north and south, and only if these operations progressed, a direct frontal attack from the west. The success of these operations was only wiped out by the treaty of Brest-Litovsk in March, 1918, under which the German troops evacuated such parts of the Ukraine as they had occupied.

12,000 Nazi Troops Reported in Finland

Moscow, April 30 (AP).—Soviet Russia reported today that Germany had landed 12,000 troops with tanks and big guns in southwestern Finland, within 50 miles of the Hanko military base which the U. S. S. R. won in her conqueror's peace with the Finnish republic.

An account of the movement of these forces—of a size about that of a panzer division—was given on the eve of another Soviet May Day, while the Red army was preparing demonstrations of its might throughout the Soviet Union.

Pravda, the official organ of the Communist Party, published the report without comment in a nine-line dispatch from its special correspondent in Tallin, Esthonia—now a part of the U. S. S. R.

Procope Denies Report

(The report was promptly denied in New York by Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, and in Helsinki by an official bulletin.

(The Finnish denials asserted that less than 1,300 German soldiers in all had landed at the Finnish port in question, Turku, under the terms of the Finnish-German agreement of last fall, providing for transit of troops on leave to and from Norway. All troops landing at Turku have been unarmed, it was stated.

(Procope said unusual seasonal conditions had ice blocked the Gulf of Bothnia, north of Turku, and thus caused a change in route of the occasional troop transit. He added that the Germans "are using their own trucks, gasoline and food."

(Rumors that Field Marshal Baron von Mannerheim had asked Germany for troops also had no foundation, Procope asserted.)

German sources in Moscow also minimized the movement and said it was only a part of the regular transit of troops from Germany through Finland to Norway.

Nevertheless it was the first time that the Soviet press ever has taken cognizance of such development. The continued presence of German troops in Finland would forge a new link in the Nazi chain around Russia—following the German occupation of Rumania and Bulgaria and the German advance through Yugoslavia and Greece to the islands off the Dardanelles.

(In London, British sources conceded the German troops might be going to Norway under Germany's transit agreement with Finland, but they asserted the landing of artillery and tanks in Finland was a violation of this agreement.)

The news came, too, just after a notice published in the magazine Foreign Trade had disclosed that the transit of war materiel across Russia has been forbidden since March 18.

Soviet, 'Ready to Rebuff Any Imperialism,' Hails May Day

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), May 1.—Marshal S. K. Timoshenko, Soviet defense commissar, said today that Russia was ready "to offer an annihilating rebuff to any encroachment on the part of imperialists upon the interests of our Socialist state and the interests of the Soviet people."

"For the first time," he said, in an order of the day on May Day, "the working people of Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Bessarabia and northern Bukowina are celebrating this year May 1 freely and joyously in the united family of peoples of the great Soviet union."

Timoshenko asserted the Soviet Union had achieved notable successes during the past year "without landlords and capitalists" and declared that "the second imperialist war, undertaken for the purpose of redivision of the world and of securing profits to capitalists, turned into a world war and embraces almost all of the capitalist countries."

"Only our great fatherland—the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics—stands like an impregnable rock in the midst of a stormy sea of international events," Timoshenko said.

"Thanks to the wise Stalinist foreign policy pursued by the Soviet government," he continued, "we are out of war; the Soviet enjoys the benefits of peace."

He singled out the non-aggression pact with Japan for mention as "a document of great political importance since it represents an important step along the path of improvement of our relations with Japan."

'The New Order' Begins in Greece

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 30.—With Nazi troops cleaning up British remnants on the south shores of the Peloponnesus, Germans tonight started incorporating Greece into the "new order."

It was indicated there was a good chance that the Greek Gen. Tsolakoglu, commander of the surrendered armies of Epirus and Macedonia, would be welcomed as head of a Greek authoritarian state such as he already has proclaimed.

"Creation of a new government in Greece is regarded in Berlin as confirmation of the fact that the war there is over," declared Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary.

Indicating that demobilized Greek soldiers would be used to police Greece, the Dienst outlined a general program for both Greece and Yugoslavia on the basis of German experience in other countries.

This would include a survey of economic conditions; establishment of military commissions for maintenance of industrial and mining facilities; appointment by the military administration of persons to represent the public and the military; immediate measures to restore public utilities; a rough census by issuance of grocery certificates; arrangements for transaction of food and other immediate essentials; return of horses to farmers.

Tsolakoglu was quoted as announcing over the Athens radio that his regime would be "a strong authoritarian government," and telling the Greek people to "face facts as they are."

On the military side, German reports said that armored units and some of the parachutists who took the Isthmus of Corinth had occupied ports on the southern Peloponnesus and that the remaining British were trying to make off for Crete in small boats under air attack. (Britons said 48,000 of the 60,000 British troops sent to Greece already had been removed.)

Dispatches to military quarters told of increasing numbers of British prisoners, but the latest figure of the high command was 5,000.

Nazi Consulate Guarded on Moving In San Francisco

San Francisco, April 30 (AP).—A heavy police detail today guarded movement of the German consular office from downtown to new headquarters in an exclusive residential section after anonymous threats to bomb the new location had been reported.

Police Inspector Sidney Du Bose, head of the crime-prevention detail, said Chancellor Herman Loeper of the consulate reported receiving two anonymous telephone calls threatening to "bomb that place out on Jackson Street," if the consulate moved in the face of protest by some residents of the area.

Bermuda Permits Autos for Defense

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 30 (AP).—The House of Assembly unanimously approved today an act allowing Americans to use automobiles for two years in connection with construction of the United States defense base.

Bermuda, long averse to motor traffic, has heretofore permitted use only of fire engines, ambulances and most municipal trucks.

Mystery 'Spy' Terror of Radio, Seized by U. S., Is a Student

"Fritz," mysterious "foreign agent" who for months has cluttered Government radio channels with weird codes, ciphers, threats of concentration camps and barrages of aerial "Heil Hitlers," was tracked down to his lair yesterday.

It turns out that the lair isn't on the Admiral Scheer, "off the coast of Madagascar," as Fritz reported, but rather in Peoria, Ill., hardly considered a nest of international spies.

And "Fritz," it further appears, is nothing more sinsister than a senior honor student in electrical engineering by name of Charles W. Johnson.

He was arrested yesterday for operating an unlicensed station on frequencies restricted for Government stations after a long sleuthing job by the Federal Communications Commission section on national defense operations. The radio detectives began their search when the ordinarily sweet dispositions of Army, Navy and other Government radio operators were changed to wild and impotent fury by repeated messages of the "foreign agent" who alternately demanded military information under threat of German army reprisals, or volunteered to transmit military data to this country.

Because some of "Fritz's" messages revealed extensive knowledge of codes and ciphers, because some were sent in German and many concluded with "Heil Hitler," Federal agents had their worried moments.

The job of tracking him down was done with specialized equipment of the FCC's monitoring service and the transmitter was traced to Johnson's Peoria home. Officers reported that when they entered the house the youth tried to destroy his equipment.

The FCC reported that the following are typical excerpts of "Fritz'" communications:

"Staff plans are now coming in, but they are very detailed and long. To much trouble to re-encipher again.

"Tell your cryptographer that this is a columnar position (Fritz proceeded to transmit the cipher message).

"I am a cryptographer. You must give me some information in exchange for this stuff. Give me the location of (gave several United States Government station calls).

"This station is now in hands of enemy. Your insolence will not be tolerated by German troops. This station now in control of German Signal Corps.

"Name here is Hans von Keitel, Heil Hitler.

"I want your codes and ciphers. Give them to me or else we will jam this net with hig rig.

"You will be in concentration camp. I am a cryptographer for this signal unit in the German army of occupation.

"I am on the Admiral Scheer and never dock." (When asked where he was located "Fritz" said "Off coast of Madagascar.")

FCC officials said they could not decide whether Johnson was a practical joker, an extreme crank or merely the victim of too liberal dosages of the more lurid pulp magazines.

A Lesson From Battle of Britain:

Hitler's Airforce Needs 5-to-1 Edge to Win

By J. Reagan McCrary

(Who made a 10-day survey of Britain at war)

New York, April 30 (INS).—"Can Britain hold out?"

That is the question many Americans ask these days.

Going back to last September, and the official record of the Battle of Britain in the air, a battle that will rank with Trafalgar in history, you will find evidence that supports this verdict:

Hitler will need better than a 5-to-1 edge over Britain to win.

Hitler had that edge in the air last fall; and between August 8 and October 31, he hurled the full weight of his advantage at Britain; and Britain bent but did not break.

The battle was split by Goering's strategy into four phases:

August 8 to 18.
August 19 to September 5.
September 6 to October 5.
October 6 to October 31.

British losses for the four phases were 375 pilots killed, 358 wounded. By day, some 1,700 people were killed, civilians, and about 3,360 wounded seriously. By night, 12,581 were killed, and 16,965 wounded.

Goering used five main types of bombers: the diving JU-87, the JU-88, various types of the Heinkel 111, the Dornier 215, and the Dornier 17. (Britain has 5 main types of bombers today.)

Guarding the bombers were two types of fighters: the Messerschmitt 109, single seat, top speed of about 350 M. P. H.; and the twin-engined two seater ME-110, top speed about 365.

Goering lost 2,375 "confirmed" aircraft between August and October 31, by daylight. That taught him never to raid Britain en masse again while the sun was up.

The British fighter force was divided in two: Half were in "readiness," which meant the pilots were in their planes, on the line before the pits that housed them, engines ticking over, loaded for action. Half were "available," which meant they were held in reserve.

First phase of the battle of the air that opened on August 8 was aimed at the airfields. The first 10 days' raids on those airfields cost Goering 697 planes; the R. A. F. lost only 153 (official).

But with the exception of Tangmere, it is a matter of record that all Goering's fury did not knock a single airfield out of "operations" for more than a half hour.

The pace was terrific! Too terrific for Goering.

So on August 19, round 2 began and the strategy shifted. This time the targets were inland airfields.

Some of round 1's targets were pounded again, but the battle had shifted inland a bit.

This strategy flunked against the R. A. F. defense as the first had. And so on September 6, round 3 began. And this time the arena was London.

London did not emerge unscathed. Damage was inflicted on dock buildings, on several factories, on railway communications, on gas and electricity plants. It also was inflicted on the enemy. One hundred and three German aircraft were destroyed.

Not mentioned in the official account is this fact: The vital points, the easiest targets, were generally missed. No tribute to the marksmanship of Nazi bombers.

And then, on the fifteenth day of round three, the climax came. September 15 was a Sunday. Dawn came up misty. There were the coveted cumulus clouds at 2,000 to 3,000 feet that the bombers love when they come down low.

The first thrust came at 11:30 a. m. In the first wave were about 100 aircraft, followed by a supporting wave of 150.

They knifed the English coast at three points — Ramsgate, between Dover and Folkestone, and 2 miles north of Dungeness. Their target—London.

Sixteen squadrons of No. 11 group, plus five squadrson from Nos. 10 and 12, roared up to take the first punch on the chin, and in the lead were five squadrons of Spitfires.

The battle that snarled in the skies locked itself in an arena about 80 miles long, 38 miles broad and from 5 to 6 miles high. Between noon and half-past, more than 200 individual "dogfights" were started and finished in split seconds at 300 to 400 miles per hour.

And at the end of the day Britain had won—at the beginning of that day the odds against Britain were longer than the odds defeatists are quoting now as evidence for their epitaphs.

By October 5 Goering knew that he could not knock out Britain with long range bombers in daylight raids.

The Battle of Britain was over. The R. A. F. won—and that is how they won Churchill's immortal praise:

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed to so few by so many."

An Old Man—'And a Fool' Shakes a Fist at Plymouth Sky

". . . Strong combat units last night again bombed Plymouth naval base. Big fires were started, chiefly in Devonport, with explosions in the gas works and in fuel deposits . . ."—From the German high command communique of April 30.

By Eddie Gilmore,

Associated Press Staff Writer

Plymouth, England, April 30.—Women and children poured out of this southwest coast city today, leaving other persons who shook their fists at the sky and vowed they never would go.

This correspondent saw an old man who stood defiant in the sagging arch of his doorless house, saying: "Blast 'em! I'll stick it until they carry me out dead."

A few doors away, however, was a woman with a child on one arm and a basket of food on the other.

"You're an old man," she said, "and a fool."

That's Plymouth today, following the fifth German aerial pounding in eight nights.

Last night's raid was described by all as the worst of the lot, with casualties heavy in the poorer sections.

Street corners and bus and railway stations were scenes of raw drama.

You heard the cry, "We can take it," but you also hear the understandable question:

"What's the use?"

I rode into Plymouth in a car with three women, a man and a child. All but one woman talked. She couldn't. She cried all the way—her husband had been killed in Monday night's raid and she was going back to Plymouth to get her few belongings.

A second woman was returning to see what was left of her home.

"My husband," she said, "stayed on. I hope he's all right. He has to be."

U. S. Mediators Will Act in G. M. Dispute Today

Following a reported complete breakdown of negotiations between the General Motors Corporation and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers, the National Defense Mediation Board will begin conferences today seeking to settle the defense program's most serious current strike threat.

Final step in the negotiations was a company announcement that the union had rejected a "$15,000,000 wage increase" involving rises of from 2 to 5 cents an hour for workers of various classifications.

The board yesterday declined to delay the hearing, after advancing it from Friday, as originally scheduled, despite the message of Charles E. Wilson, company president, that his executives would be unable to attend. In reply, board vice chairman William H. Davis declared postponement "impossible" and suggested that as many General Motors officials as possible be represented today, "with the understanding that the board will not press for an agreement upon any issue before all of your representatives are present on Friday morning."

At a late hour last night, the board panel to consider the dispute, involving 160,000 workers at 61 G. M. plants had not been announced.

The case was certified to the board last Friday at which time agreement was reached on the board's request to postpone a threatened strike. The principal issues are demands for a 10-cent wage increase, a closed shop, larger power for a labor umpire and revision of the shop-steward system.

Last night, G. M. offices here issued a statement by Wilson announcing that he had offered the union a wage increase totaling about $15,000,000 a year, even though there was no economic justification for the corporation to increase pay rates.

The problem, he said, is "how much are we willing to pay to avoid a strike."

"Entirely Competitive"

Wilson argued that G. M.'s wages are "entirely competitive" with other companies in the automobile industry and well above rates in other heavy industry fields.

Wilson said his offer provided for wage increasse of 2 cents for all hourly-rated employes, 3 to 5 cents for skilled and semiskilled production operators earning more than 90 cents an hour and 5 cents for skilled workers on nonproduction work who make from $1 to $1.35 an hour.

Wilson classed the closed-shop demand of the U. A. W. as "a dictator setup" not beneficial for the men, the company or the country. He added that the company had offered improvement in the shop-steward system and extension of the labor umpire's authority.

The union's 10-cent wage demand, he said, would mean an additional pay-roll cost of about $50,000,000 annually. The company's profits, after taxes, for the first quarter of 1941 were more than $64,500,000, about $3,000,000 less than for the corresponding quarter last year. Its proportion of net income before taxes for the first three months of this year, however, was more than 52 per cent higher than the total for the first quarter of 1940.

The Mediation Board yesterday also received its twenty-third case, the Utica & Mohawk Cotton Mills strike, involving 1,800 workers. The Utica, N. Y., plant, which makes sheets and textile products for the Army, has been closed by a strike of the C. I. O. Textile Workers since March 25.

Compulsory Mediation Bill Reported Out

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Rules Committee yesterday approved for House consideration the Vinson compulsory mediation bill, but legislative leaders indicated the controversial measure will not reach the floor for at least ten days.

The Rules Committee vote, reported as 6 to 5 by Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, came after a two-hour executive session. Members said an earlier motion to pigeonhole the bill was defeated before the final vote.

Under the rule granted by the committee, House leaders foresaw the possibility of a week-long free-for-all defense labor debate.

The rule permits two days of general debate on the bill before amendments are taken up, with the House permitted to consider "any matter which relates to labor disputes and conditions in national defense."

Predictions that the bill would be drastically revised on the House floor were repeated yesterday by influential members of both parties.

Sponsors of the bill are understood to be ready to drop the ban on new closed-shop contracts and cut down the penalties for violation of the 25-day cooling-off period in defense labor disputes.

Debate on the Vinson bill cannot begin until week after next, Majority Leader McCormack said yesterday, because the House first must take up several "more urgent" measures, including the Bland bill for taking over foreign shipping in American waters and legislation to extend the Government's powers to establish priorities in defense materials.

The priorities bill was cleared by the Rules Committee yesterday. It would give the President power to establish priorities in delivery of material to foreign governments under lend-lease law contracts and in American Government contracts, besides those held by the Army and Navy, which the President considers vital to defense.

Axis Lags in Plane Output, JouettSays

be put to work fabricating parts for the plane producers.

John D. Biggers, directors of the division of production of OPM, echoed this plea that the defense work be spread out.

Looking back to last May, Biggers said, the progress seems phenomenal. New plants have been rushed to completion. Tremendous additions of machine tools and equipment have been made with unparalleled speed.

"The monthly production of airplanes has been trebled," Biggers said. "The monthly output of tanks increased 600 per cent; powder 1,000 per cent; small arms ammunition 1,200 per cent; Garand rifles 360 per cent; machine guns—the .30 caliber, trebled; the .50 caliber, quadrupled, and so on down the list.

"So much for the initial achievements of American industry, guided by the wise planning and experience of our armed services.

"Yes, looking back, the progress seems good—in fact excellent. But looking ahead, it is clear that we have made just a beginning; a good start, but, nevertheless, only a start . . .

"In spite of my confidence, I want to make it just as clear as I possibly can that we cannot for one moment be satisfied. One of the most dangerous things that could possibly happen to this country today would be for our people, in any walk of life, to get the impression that the defense program is rolling along—that it will take care of itself."

An earnest plea to both management and labor to establish a better understanding of one another's problems in the interests of defense and the national welfare was made by Albert W. Hawkes, president of Cogoleum-Nairn, Inc., at a special labor relations session.

Hawkes' name figured prominently in discussions of a successor to James S. Kemper, of Chicago, the chamber's president. The election will be held today, after the organization has adopted resolutions laying down its policy for the next year.

Commenting on statements that current strikes have not been of alarming proportions, Hawkes said: "I contend that one strike, or the loss of one hour in any industry that is doing work vital to our defense program, is too much of a loss and a reflection on the party or parties causing it.

"The sins of a few capitalists," he said, were visited upon all capital, and he warned that "public opinion can cause this to happen to labor."

Terming the employe-employer problem of first importance, Hawkes said that the national defense program and America's future depend upon a solution of the problem through voluntary cooperation.

"Let no worker or capitalist forget that he is just a member of the great society of American people and that it is the greatest organization on earth," he said. "As a member of that society, he must make and continue his vows of loyalty, complete support and sacrifice in order to maintain America's traditions and continue its progress."

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of the Methodist Church in the Boston area, told the delegates that American businessmen must take positive, not negative action, or "the masses will follow the demagogue who comes with his easily phrased panacea, pointing the way to the Promised Land, but actually leading people to the desert."

Coal Mines to Reopen Today

creases, to be retroactive to the date of the mines' opening.

Conferences will be resumed in New York on May 12, it was announced, at which time the miners will seek to obtain their final objective, elimination of the 40-cent-a-day differential between North and South wages.

Agreement to reopen the Northern mines, representing about 70 per cent of the Appalachian area production, was reached several weeks ago, on the basis of a $1 a day wage boost to a total figure of $7 a day. The agreement, however, was contingent on the same total wage being granted in the South, and no mines were to be opened until negotiations with the Southerners were completed.

The Southern owners agreed Monday night to resume production on the basis of the President's proposal, but a last minute hitch developed in conference Tuesday over translating the $1 increase to miners on tonnage rates and in other special classifications.

Although yesterday's agreement was only a temporary one, it was immediately and unanimously ratified by the U. M. W. policy committee. Lewis said it "augurs well" for the completion of a new contract. Spokesmen for the Southern operators were equally hopeful.

Meantime, OPM Director General Knudsen told his press conference yesterday that the 400,000-man 30-day strike had not caused any shutdowns of defense plants, but that several steel mills had been badly affected. Reports from the field yesterday indicated that some of the worst-hit steel companies began to reopen banked blast furnaces in anticipation of speedy and reliable supplies.

In New York, negotiations for a new contract in the Nation's anthracite field, where 110,000 miners are employed, continued beyond the midnight expiration date of the present contract, on an agreement between the U. M. W. and the hard-coal operators to continue work for a 10-day period. Union demands are for a $1 a day wage raise, and a 20 per cent increase for contract workers.

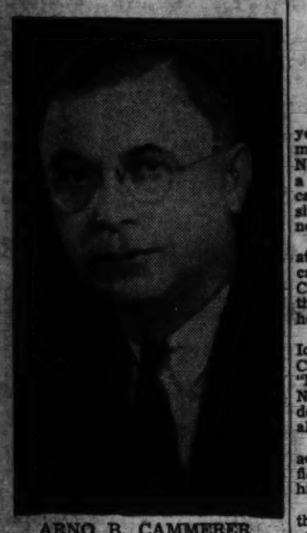
Arno B. Cammerer, Ex-Park Head, Dies



ARNO B. CAMMERER

Succumbs to Heart Attack at 57; Funeral Tomorrow

Death from coronary thrombosis yesterday claimed Arno B. Cammerer, 57, former director of the National Park Service, who played a major role in the Capital's physical improvement and beautification since 1933. He died at his home in nearby Cherrydale, Va.

Relieved from the directorship at his own request last June because of a heart condition, Mr. Cammerer was named director of the bureau's Region No. 1 with headquarters in Richmond, Va.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, upon being informed of Mr. Cammerer's death, eulogized his "long and honorable career in the National Park Service in which his devotion to his duty overshadowed all other considerations."

"It was this very devotion," Ickes added, "which caused him to sacrifice his health and contributed to his untimely death."

Funeral services will be held at the Hines funeral home tomorrow afternoon at a time to be announced today. Interment will be in Janesville, Wis., Saturday.

Mr. Cammerer is survived by his wife, Ida Abendroth Cammerer; mother, Mrs. Frederick Caemmerer, and his sister, Mrs. Williams Barber, of Lanham, Md. H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, is a cousin.

For the sake of simplicity, the former National Park Service head dropped the first "e" from his family name, Caemmerer, some years ago.

Son of a clergyman, he was born in a sod house in Arapahoe, Nebr., July 31, 1883. He received his public schooling in Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin and came to Washington in 1904 to take a job as a Treasury bookkeeper.

Here he went to night school classes and studied law at Georgetown University, receiving his degree in 1911. He became assistant director of the National Park Service in 1919, after serving three years as assistant secretary of the Fine Arts Commission.

When Horace M. Albright resigned as director in 1933 to take a private position, Mr. Cammerer was named as his success.

Both nationally and locally, his duties were rigorous and of wide variety. When the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks was absorbed by the Interior Department in 1933, Mr. Cammerer because its titular head.

In an ex officio capacity, he was vice chairman and executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, held membership on the Alley Dwelling Authority and District Zoning Commission, and figured prominently in other city improvement enterprises.

Under his directorship, the National Park Service was expanded many fold and the Great Smoky Mountains and Shenandoah National Parks created.

Lawyers Warned To Speed Up Pleas

A warning to District lawyers to make pleas for jury trial in civil cases promptly was sounded yesterday by Justice Oscar R. Luhring when he overruled a motion for a jury trial.

The motion was filed by an attorney who had failed to enter his client's request promptly.

Unfamiliarity with the new rules was accepted as an excuse for failure to comply with the time requirements for a couple of months after their adoption, the justice pointed out.

Dewey Is Out to Make Sure Good Time Is Had by Soldiers

Seeing that America's new citizen soldiers have a chance to get away from the sergeant and lieutenant and have a little fun is going to be his full-time job, Thomas E. Dewey, New York District Attorney, and new chairman of the United Service organizations for National Defense, said here yesterday.

Dewey, in a press conference at the Mayflower, declared he intends to start next week inspecting Army camps, following conferences here with Army and Navy officials, as a starter for the United Service Organizations campaign for $10,765,000 to provide recreation facilities for men in the defense forces.

Heading the campaign will be "pretty much a full-time job for me," Dewey said. He added that he will still be in charge of the District Attorney's office. "If the office didn't operate just as well when I'm away as when I'm there, it wouldn't be a good office," he said.

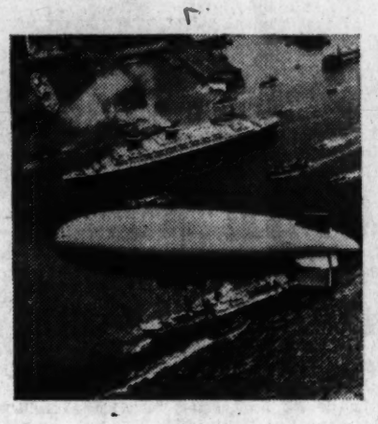
Citing the Army and Navy concern about leisure time activities of the men in uniform, Dewey said that the crying need is for something for the million and a half boys to do in the evenings and on weekends when they're off the reservation.

"We've taken these million and a half boys out of their home lives and we must offer them a substitute," he said. "It's a social problem, a morale problem."

"They're American boys, and they want to be able to get away from the sergeant and the lieutenant and have fun. They need a quiet place to write a letter, a decent background where a man can be his own boss once in a while."

He pointed out that while the Government is putting up recreation buildings near some 360 camps throughout the country, operation of these buildings will be up to private agencies in the communities. He added that the drive for funds will be conducted in 600 cities.

What good is a BLIMP?



THE slow speed at which lighter-than-air ships can be flown is their outstanding advantage in coast patrol and convoy duty. Their ability to hover practically motionless in the air enables them to detect lurking submarines and mines—at depths invisible to swift-flying airplanes. At their slow speeds blimps consume far less fuel than five-mile-a-minute planes — can remain aloft hours longer. America today commands the most efficient and air-worthy of these aerial "spotters"—because Goodyear is the only organization on earth that has been continuously building, operating and improving its own fleet of blimps since the first World War.

Barkley Favors Palestine Project

Creation of a national home for world Jewry in Palestine was urged last night by American and British government officials and a Zionist leader at a banquet at the Shoreham Hotel, launching the activities of the newly-formed American Palestine Committee.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley demanded the Jewish people "be restored to their rightful heritage" with the reminder that "many portions of our human heritage . . . and the right of small nations to live their own lives" are being "trampled underfoot" by Nazi aggression.

The Kentucky Senator continued, "I say therefore that in the world of justice to the small nations, which we in America envison, a place must be found for the Jewish people. "That place is Palestine."

Arabs Share Benefits

Stressing the desirability of re-establishment of a Jewish national home on ancestral soil, the legislator said that Arabs have "shared in the benefits which Jewish enterprise has conferred upon the land."

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, warned that in postwar Europe millions of Jews will be forced to migrate "and seek a new existence."

"Whither shall they go?" demanded the speaker. "This is not a matter of concern for Jews alone. It is of vital concern to the future of Europe . . . and the whole of the civilized world."

Weizmann warned that many Jews were "condemned to become human derelicts" unless a national home were found for them.

"You can dump Jews anywhere," the Zionist leader said, "in Abyssinia, in Madagascar, in the jungle, in the Gobi Desert—but they will never create there a national home nor will the Jewish problem be solved thereby."

"Palestine Is Place"

Palestine, Weizmann stressed, is the place where the "national destiny" of the Jewish people lies.

Declaring he was mindful of the possibility of a German march into Palestine, the speaker said he had "great confidence in the heroism and capacity of the British Middle East forces with whom, he said, 10,000 Jews are fighting.

Maj. Victor Cazalet, Conservative member of the British House of Commons, and chairman of the Palestine committee of that body, expressed the belief that "Jew and Arab by cooperation will create a Middle East which may rival in prosperity the happiest day of ancient glory."

Referring to Jewish achivements in Palestine which he studied in a recent visit to that country, Maj. Cazalet termed the upbuilding of the country "the greatest piece of constructive work that this generation has witnessed."

A message was read from Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, outlining work of the American Palestine Committee whose chairmanship he assumed after its formation last month.

Washington's Biggest Thrill Is Einstein

Three Washington visitors had a refreshingly different answer yesterday when that inevitable question, "What has impressed you most in Washington?" was popped at them.

Did they give the usual reply: "Ah, your handsome buildings" or "the Washington Monument, of course" or "Congress in session."

They did not.

"Our biggest thrill," said Enrique Gil Gilbert, speaking for his two companions and himself, "came yesterday morning in Union Station, watching Prof. Albert Einstein fumbling in his pockets for five minutes in search of his railroad tickets."

(Dr. Einstein was in the Capital to attend the meeting of the National Academy of Sciences).

Gilbert, 28, Ciro Alegria, 31, and Dr. Cecilio J. Carneiro, 29, were group-interviewed at the Pan-American Union after they were greeted by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general. Peruvian, Ecuadorean and Brazilian, respectively, they are being feted from city to city for having written the best novels submitted in a Latin-American contest sponsored by Farrar & Rinehart, New York publishers, and Redbook magazine.

Alegria's book "El Mundo es Ancho y Ajeno" ("Broad and Alien is the World") brought him the $2,500 first prize. A political exile from his native Peru, his home is in Chile.

Gilbert, a teacher of Spanish literature in Ecuador, won first honorable mention with his "Nuestro Pan" ("Our Daily Bread"). "A Fogueira," or "The Bonfire," is the title of the novel by Dr. Carneiro, who received second honorable mention. He is a surgeon.

All three books are on subjects with which the writers are personally familiar, Alegria's is about Indian peasants victimized by landgrabbers. Gilbert, who worked in the rice fields to gain material, writes about the peons who grow rice and those who export it.

Dr. Carneiro, son of Syrian immigrants, is largely autobiographical in his novel, "The Bonfire." All three novels, plus a fourth by the Mexican Angel Menendez, who was unable to make the trip, will be published this fall.

Yesterday the trio visited Mount Vernon and saw other sights. Today they will go to the Senate and be received by Vice President Wallace A luncheon, given by the staff of the Hispanic Foundation, Library of Congress, will follow.

U. S. Pilots Watch Battle of Britain

Both the Army and Navy have sent an undisclosed number of younger pilots to Great Britain to act as observers in the Battle of Britain and learn the lessons taught by aerial fighting there, it is learned today.

Dairy Is Sued For $100,000 On Milk Deal

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association yesterday filed suit in District Court for $100,000 damages, or to prevent the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, Inc., from canceling its contract whereby the association supplies the dairy with 2,500 gallons of milk daily.

The association said through its attorney, former Corporaiton Counsel Elwood H. Seal, that the contract had been made February 1, 1940, the effective date of the Secretary of Agriculture's Milk Market Order, No. 45, regulating milk in the Washington metropolitan area. The contract was to be effective as long as the order existed, the suit claimed.

Some 1,300 members of the association on dairy farms in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania would be affected by a cancellation of the contract, it was contended. The milk which the association has been supplying the dairy probably will have to be sold at a cheaper price to other dairies for conversion into ice cream and other products, the suit pointed out.

Counsel said a suit may have to be filed each month to fix the exact amount of loss by the association if the cancellation is not ended.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights
Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

2 English Refugee Children, Girl Students Share Honors at Takoma Tulip Show

Two English refugee children and a girl student at Calvin Coolidge Junior High School shared honors last night at the opening of the twenty-sixth annual tulip show of the Takoma Horticultural Club, at the Takoma public library, Fifth and Cedar Street Northwest.

Miss Lois Wellington, 218 Spruce Avenue, Takoma Park, a junior at Calvin Coolidge, won the sweepstakes, capturing seven blue ribbons, five reds, and two whites. Her exhibit of a "Louis IV," a bronze edged breeder type in mauve violet color, was judged the best tulip in the show.

Last year Miss Wellington won a cup for the highest number of points and the year before she received the blue ribon for the best flower.

Two Children Win

Top honors in the children's miniature class went to Eleanore Poupore, 9, and her brother, Roy, 10, English refugees, who live with Mrs. E. Clarence Rice at 7516 Morningside Drive Northwest.

It was the first time in the club's history that a separate class for children under 12 was conducted. Eleanore took a blue ribbon with a display of pink azaleas and lavender phlox arranged in a blue glass ball hanging from a circle of twisted crystal with a mirror base. She also won third place in an arrangement class for a low bowl filled with phlox tulips and azaleas. Roy was awarded a red ribbon for a basket filled with red azaleas, candy tuft and tulips.

The show was marked by the scarcity of tulip bulbs from Holland. Although there were fewer blooms and varieties at the show, the entries were definitely of a rarer type than other years.

Clarence G. Carr judged the tulips. Other flowers were judged by Mrs. Oliver E. Sweet and Mrs. J. Preston Swecker. Marion L. Boat was chairman. The show will be open to the public today from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

Pansy Display

Among the outstanding exhibits was a small wooden log holding a dozen pansies, displayed by Katherine Nau, 4713 Thirteenth Street Northwest, who took a blue ribbon in one of the arrangement classes. The tiniest exhibit was shown by Isabelle Smith, 612 Oglethorpe Street Northwest. Her red glass pitcher containing tiny white violets, forget-me-nots and blades of grass measures three-quarters of an inch.

Those awarded ribbons in various classes were as follows:

Collection of 25, Col. William H. England; collection of 12 varieties; Lois Wellington; collection of six varieties, J. Preston Swecker; Darwin, Lois Wellington, Col. England, J. Mark Albertson, J. P. Swecker, Isabelle Smith, Mrs. George Furman and Albert Lingle.

Breeder tulips: Col. England, Miss Wellington, J. M. Albertson, Mrs. Furman, J. P. Swecker, Albert Lingle.

Miscellaneous tulips: Col. England, Miss Wellington, F. J. DeMoll and Albert Lingle.

Hardy spring flowers: Katherine Nau, Raymond J. Crowley, Isabelle Smith, Dr. Edwin C. Powell, J. P. Swecker, Mrs. Oliver E. Sweet, Mrs. Thomas Powell, Marion L. Boat and M. K. MacKnet.

Arrangements: Mrs. Thomas Powell, Fred G. Snyder, Katherine Nau, Marion Boat, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Fiedler, Mrs. O. E. Sweet, Isabelle Smith. Miniatures: Jimmy Fiedler, Roy Poupore, Eleanor Poupore, Lottie Fahrenbruck, Mrs. E. C. Rice, Lois Wellington and Bobby Swecker.

Judge Neilson Orders Trial For Buckley in Traffic Case

Police Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday ordered to trial on a driving while drunk charge, M. Edward Buckley, jr., 34, an attorney, who was charged following a three-car collision last July 21. Buckley was fined January 13 on another charge growing out of the same collision.

In handing down his ruling yesterday Judge Neilson said he would 'welcome further expression from our Court of Appeals on double jeopardy in traffic cases" and suggested that defense counsel "take steps looking to further expression on this proposition from that tribunal."

James R. Kirkland, Buckley's lawyer, said last night that he would note an exception to the ruling this morning and that he intends to take the case to the District Court of Appeals.

Buckley originally was charged with driving while drunk, July 21, 1940, after his automobile was in collision with two others at Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest.

Three months later, on October 30, the charge was nolle prossed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Ralph D. Quinter, jr., and Buckley subsequently was charged with a lesser violation of driving on the wrong side of the street.

On January 13, 1941, Buckley appeared before Judge Hobart Newman, pleaded guilty to the lesser charge and was fined $25. This latter court apearance took place while neither the police nor the drivers of the other two automobiles were present.

In denying Buckley's plea of double jeopardy, Jude Neilson said of the case:

"It involves a question which never before has arisen in precisely this form in our jurisdiction. It is important to the people of the District, as likewise it is to the defendant."

"The traffic problem is a major and complex one," Judge Neilson stated. "It calls for intelligent and far-sighted action on the part of the director of vehicles and traffic, the police and the prosecutors. Among other things this means vigorous prosecution, especially of the guilty, who have no regard for the safety and property of other citizens of the District.

"Good enforcement demands the preferment at the outset of the proper charge and vigorous prosecution thereof, so that the case might be settled finally once and for all. In equity and fairness, a defendant should not be called upon to face continuous and repeated prosecutions for an offense committed at one time and place."

Judge Neilson ruled that the two offenses charged against the attorney—driving on the wrong side of the street and drunken driving—are two distinct offenses flowing from the same act and that the evidence required to establish one offense "is both in law and fact separate and distinct."

Apple Blossom Queen to Get Crown Today

Post Staff Writer

Winchester, Va., April 30.—This "apple capital of the world" was dressed in flags and bunting against a background of pink, green and white today to welcome Miss Mollie Foulkes Lee on her arrival for a two-day reign as "Queen Shenandoah XVIII."

The 18-year-old descendant of Virginia's Lee family, who will be crowned Queen of the Apple Blossom Festival tomorrow by Defense Commissioner Edward R. Stettinius, jr., arrived in a motorcade escorted by State police.

Accompanied by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Robert C. Lee, and her sister, Kay Lee, of New York, she was met in Washington, when she arrived by train from New York by a committee headed by the festival's director general, Tom Baldridge, who whisked her to Winchester by automobile.

Entertained at Dinner

She went immediately to the home of her hostess, Mrs. H. B. McCormac, where she was entertained at a small dinner. Afterward she attended a prefestival dance at the Winchester Golf Club.

Members of the committe which met Miss Lee in Washington included H. R. Kern, jr., H. B. McCormac, Mrs. Joseph Kalbach and Miss Margaret Snyder.

Before Miss Lee's arival, the more than 1,200 Handley High School students and teachers staged a dress rehearsal for the pageant, "Our Heritage," which will be presented twice during the festival, once tomorrow and again on Friday.

With a patriotic theme, the pageant will include four flag groups in addition to a blossom ballet, with thousands of blossoms made by teachers and students providing added color.

Its first presentation will follow the coronation of Queen Shenandoah in Handley High School Bowl tomorrow at 3 p. m. The pageant will be repeated Friday morning and the festival parade will be held that afternoon.

Other highlights of the festival's opening day will include an "aerial cavalcade" at Winchester Municipal Airport, a luncheon for the queen and her court, a stage luncheon for distinguished guests and band concerts.

At noon Miss Lee will pause to do her bit for national defense. In a ceremony at the Winchester Postoffice, she will receive the first national defense bond issued in Winchester.

Governor's Day

Present at the ceremony will be Gov. James H. Price, of Virginia; Ramsey S. Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General, and Postmaster W. Nelson Page, of Winchester.

In honor of Price's presence, the opening day has been designated as "Governor's Day."

The first day's festivities will be concluded with a reception for the 30 "princesses" of the queen's court at the armory, with Benny Goodman providing music.

The reception will follow a torchlight and mummers' parade at 8 p. m. by Winchester and visiting firemen and a fireworks display in Handley Bowl.

Firemen from New Market, Harrisonburg, Berryville, Purcellville, Hagerstown, Md., Green Castle, Pa., Charles Town, W. Va., Broadway and Woodstock will compete for awards in the mummers' procession.

In the grand feature parade Friday afternoon there will be 40 marshals, with Dr. L. M. Allen, owner Snider, jr., Mrs. H. S. Barr, Robert Stine, Leon Wine, Mrs. Amos Shryock, Lester Fisher and Clarence Eakle.

Little Annie Butler, Robert Artrip and Johnny Butler, all of Winchester, will be junior mounted marshals.

Fire Destroys Airport Lumber

Fire caused by the explosion of a gasoline-operated power saw at the new National Airport, at Gravelly Point, last night destroyed several piles of lumber which was to go into construction of hangar No. 2 at the airport. Total damage was set at $500.

Six pieces of District fire-fighting apparatus and several more from Arlington and Alexandria responded. The blaze burned fiercely several minutes before being brought under control.

No one was injured and airport officials were unable to give any reason for the explosion. The lumber was owned by the John McShain Construction Co., which is building the hangar.

Capital Chapter Of Rival Society To D.A.R. Disbands

The Washington chapter of Descendants of the American Revolution, established two years ago to campaign against the "Tory propaganda" of the Daughters of the American Revolution, has dissolved and surrendered its charter, effective today.

Disagreement over the action of the Descendants' national executive committee in New York "for making and releasing decisions publicly without consulting members" was blamed by a local leader last night as causing the dissolution.

Mrs. Charles Putnam, past local president, of 2300 Highland Place Northwest, declared last night that the local chapter considered the national committee's action "dictatorial." Lack of voice by local members in determining national policy was another cause, she said.

Paul Allen, national executive secretary, blamed the dissolution in a public statement on "membership trouble over foreign affairs" and "the usual honest confusion of many liberals in these days."

Antarctic of Value If Canal Is Lost, Adm. Byrd Says

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, retired, believes that in event of destruction of the Panama Canal the United States might be forced to establish at least part-time naval and air bases in the Antarctic.

As commanding officer of the United States Antarctic Service, which has just terminated an expedition to South Polar areas, Byrd told a House Appropriations Subcommittee, in testimony made public yesterday, that under such circumstances, Antarctica had positive strategic value to this country, apparently to help maintain communications between the Atlantic and Pacific.

Purse Snatcher Gets $383 in Cash And $200 Checks

Mrs. Leeta A. Kling, owner and manager of a rooming house at 1325 Sixteenth Street Northwest, lost $383.96 in cash and $200 in checks last night to a colored pocketbook snatcher, she told police.

The thief, she said, grabbed her pocketbook as she entered her automobile in the rear of the rooming house about 8:30 p. m. with her husband, M. W. Kling.

Kling gave chase to the snatcher, who was accompanied by several other colored men, but was unable to catch him. The pocketbook, said Mrs. Kling, contained a month's receipts from roomers who had paid their rent yesterday.

Power Funds Boost Interior Dept. Budget

By the Associated Press

The House Appropriations Committee recommended a $177,019,078 appropriation for the Interior Department yesterday — $21,469,245 more than it had in the current year but $6,325,270 below the amount approved by the Budget Bureau.

The increase over this year's appropriation, the committee said, was owing primarily to the need for acceleration of the construction of power facilities "which are of great importance to national defense."

Specifically, the committee referred to an increase of $11,358,500 for Bonneville Dam tranmission and substation facilities which officials testified were urgently needed to supply expanding defense industries in the Pacific Northwest.

The committee recommended $78,934,000 for the Reclamation Bureau which it said was "fully justified by the tremendous importance of reclamation to the national defense program." The reclamation item was $4,200,000 below the figure approved by the Budget Bureau.

The committee disallowed $987,500 sought by the Geological Survey for topographic mapping of "strategic areas" and while expressing "serious doubt" whether the work was essential for military purposes, said that in any event the money should be provided in a War Department bill.

A total of $80,000, an increase of $15,000, was recommended to enable the Geological Survey to expedite a search for tin ore in Alaska because of "the serious shortage" of that metal in this country.

The committee also approved a budget estimate of $6,000,000 for continuation of construction of the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace parkways, an increase of $4,000,000.

Capital Student Is Found Dead

The body of Willis R. Slaughter, jr., of Washington, a sophomore in the College of Engineering of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., was found last night in the chapter room of his fraternity house there, a bullet through the head.

Nearby was a .45 caliber revolver, the Associated Press reported. His parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Willis R. Slaughter, of 3319 Rowland Place Northwest, had flown to Ithaca from Washington to assist in a search for the youth, missing since last Saturday.

Dr. Robert Broad, Ithaca health officer, said a note was found near the body. He said young Slaughter had been dead for several days.

April Warmest In D. C. History

April, the warmest one in the history of Washington weather records, wound up yesterday in warm sunshine that sent the mercury to 85.3 at 4 p. m., and the Weather Bureau forecast fair and continued warm weather for today.

Yesterday's peak brought the month's temperature mean to 60.4, a record for April, the bureau reported. Previous record for April heat was set in 1915, tied in 1921, when the mean temperature was 59.

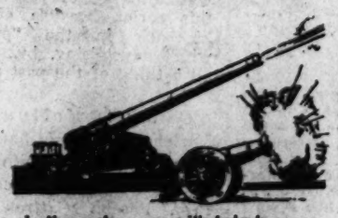
Dictionaries, here's a new word—
HYDRO-FORMING!

Americans, here's an entirely new way of making gasoline—destined to give a new definition to power!



In the modern gun, with today's propellent powders, greater power is achieved because the flame is controlled—pressure is built up behind the shell. The old cannon wasted power in violent, uncontrolled explosion.

The word is so new it isn't in the dictionary yet—but you'll hear it a lot from now on. From a revolutionary new refining process—Hydro-forming—comes a new gas that steps up all old ideas of what gas can do—of how much work per drop it can turn out!

For Hydro-formed American Gas solves the problem in an entirely new manner, releasing more power because it burns in a different way.

How Comes Flame Control—Combustion Control!

Burning gasoline vapor is the source of engine power. How it burns tells how much will be used, and how much wasted.

Old-fashioned gasolines burn with an explosive, violent shock, and much of the power is lost in wasteful detonation. But if that flame—combustion—can be controlled, we achieve power with less violent shock—usable driving power, not wasted power.

This is exactly what FLAME CONTROL accomplishes—now attained in Hydro-formed American Gas! Combustion IS controlled. We have power—sustained, increasing, e-x-p-a-n-d-i-n-g pressure on the pistons—dynamic thrust that reaches for more of the potential energy in every atom of gasoline. But shock is greatly reduced.

Flame Control Means Cushioned Power!

As violent, detonating shock is cut down, Cushioned Power replaces it. We retain all the energy of the combustion, yet we have a soft, sustained, cushioned surge of power. Motors are s-m-o-o-t-h, obedient, yet thoroughly alive with action. Destructive blows on bearings and other delicate motor parts are hushed, and in their place comes a satin-soft f-l-o-w of power.

Increased Volatility Makes Better Road Octane!

Hydro-formed American Gas is more volatile, more aromatic, more easily vaporized. Its anti-knock constituents do not remain in a liquid state as in the average conventional gasolines, but become vaporized—distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike.

Official results of road tests by Industry Committees show that conventional gasolines, on the average, lose octanes on the road. Hydro-formed American Gas actually gains them—surpassing laboratory figures. And it's road octane that counts, not laboratory ratings!

Hydro-formed AMERICAN GAS Still At Regular Gas Price!

Here's the frequent result of poor gasoline distribution—some cylinders get too much—some too little. Result—poor performance.

Hydro-formed American Gas is distributed more evenly and impartially to all cylinders alike. Result—less waste, more usable power.

You don't have to be a chemist to realize the tremendous importance of this discovery, pioneered by the American Oil Company. Yet in spite of all these amazing improvements—in spite of the new power now available, this latest discovery of gasoline chemistry still sells at regular gas price!

Famous AMOCO-GAS Now Hydro-formed, Too!

The new Hydro-forming process has also been applied to Amoco-Gas, the original special motor fuel, which likewise moves forward and upward to an all-time high in quality and efficiency.

A new and greater source of power—a new and greater motoring pleasure—a thrilling experience—all these await you in Hydro-formed American Gas and Amoco-Gas.

Some Future Historian Will Wonder at 'Fantasia'

So-Called 'Nazi' Film Will Aid British Relief; Jane Cowl, Dennis King, Al Trahan in Benefit; Civic Theater Gains Time, Loses Valued Member

By Richard L. Coe.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

SOME LATTER-DAY HISTORIAN is going to have a laugh when, poring over 1941 papers in the Library of Congress periodical room, he comes upon the two varying viewpoints on Walt Disney's "Fantasia."

First he'll have happened on Dorothy Thompson's widely-remarked dictum that "Fantasia" is completely in line with the Nazi ideology. Then a bit later he'll come across an item such as this—that when "Fantasia" is presented for the first time in the National Capital on Monday evening, May 12, at the National, it will benefit the very empire struggling to destroy the doctrine which so shocks Miss T.

For, evil influence or not, the Washington opening of the Walt Disney-Leopold Stokowski collaboration will be under the sponsorship of "Young America Wants to Help," a division of the British War Relief Society. Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt is national chairman of "Young America Wants to Help," and it's safe to say the first night audience Mrs. Roosevelt of Oyster Bay will summon should sound like Washington's inimitable Who's Who.

Following the benefit opening, there will be two performances daily of "Fantasia." Tickets for both benefit and the following performances will be available at the National box office Monday morning. Meanwhile can you help wondering about that scholar of the future? He may not know exactly what "Fantasia" was, but he can hardly fail to put us down as poor, confused idiots.

"Men in White" Resumes Tomorrow Evening

This department's espionage service is working very nicely, thanks. Gestapo-like, four or five spys have always proved reliable and their latest efforts indicates that "Men in White" is doing the Civic Theater proud up at Wardman Park these nights. The play resumes tomorrow and Saturday evenings, with no performance tonight. Close to 20 minutes have been chopped from Sunday's otherwise effective opening and lobby-listening reveals that the Sidney Kingsley play is best-liked play the group has given its followers this season (and that's saying plenty). And the logical reason for Sunday night's mechanical bog was the absence of William M. Girvan, technical maestro of the theater since its inception. Bill is now teaching at Leland Stanford for a year, but was able to supervise this production before he left for the coast. And both he and wife Jo would be downright cheering if they knew how well Alma Mater is progressing.

Actors' Fund: Cowl to King to Trahan

Here's that daily bulletin on the Actors' Fund Benefit: Jane Cowl, Dennis King and Al Trahan and Company will join Gracie Fields, Zorina and George Jessel on the National stage Sunday evening, May 11. The impeccable Jane was last here for the President's birthday performance of "Old Acquaintance" and, if memory serves, King was hereabouts for "Petticoat Fever" out at Olney. And Al? It's only a month or two ago he was as funny as ever at the Capitol. Does "and Company" include Geri Dorsey?

Mr. New Eyes Mr. Cook's Visitors

You may not know Sam New. He's backstage doorman at the Earle and while the college lads have been after him often enough for closeups of those wondrous Roxyettes, this week it's been something else. Sam says that almost all of Catholic University's hit musical "Cook Book" has been back to laugh with Joe Cook, hero of their musical biography. The piece closed last night in the University Theater, most successful of that enterprising department's season. Joe closes tonight at the Earle. Wonder if the boys and girls out at C. U. know what nationally-known weekly will have a story of their "Cook Book" when it hits the news stands this morning?

PEOPLE IN PLACES: Yes, that was Karen Morley, of "Somewhere in France" and filmland coming out of The Post yesterday morning. We won't let her get away next time—if there is one. All we need is an alarm clock . . . Yes, again, that was Genevieve Tobin in the Mayflower lobby Tuesday afternoon. The "G. K." on her belt indicated that here's an actress who'd prefer to be known by her husband's name rather than her own. She's the wife of Film Director William Keighley . . . A hundred boys of the Industrial Home School were such happy guests of the Open Air Theater the other night that Manager Eddie Allen has invited them down again . . . Denis Connell, one of our town's finer resident players, directed the Mask and Bauble Club of Georgetown University in that merry mystery, "Whistling in the Dark," with Tom Mullahey, president of the club, heading the cast . . . "The Late Christopher Bean," Sidney Howard's warming play, is being done tomorrow and Saturday evenings by the Woodside Dramatic Club in the Woodside Church Social Hall, 8814 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring, after a February postponement. E. Francis McDevitt is directing a cast headed by Leland Williams, Flora Smith, Pearl Mooers, Dee Shannon, Fanny Marks, William B. Marks and James Einum.

'Positively, Mr. Gallagher!' 'Absolutely, Mr. Shean!'

AL SHEAN AND CHARLES WINNINGER

as the memorable "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," comedy stars of many a "Ziegfeld Follies," these two noted character actors find themselves in the enviable position of being associated with Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr, Lana Turner, Eve Arden and a bevy of beauties in "Ziegfeld Girl," continuing into a second week on the Palace screen. Shean, of course, was the original Shean of the duo, while the erstwhile Capt. Andy of "Show Boat" plays his late partner in the new film

'The Lady Eve' Sets Up Shop At Columbia

"The Lady Eve," thank heaven, is back on F Street. She sets up shop at the Columbia Theater this morning, thus softening the blow to the town's soothsayers, all of whom agreed instantly that it was good for two or three weeks at the Palace, where it opened.

How did it happen that the funniest picture of the last 47 moons didn't do what the know-it-alls thought it should? Well, the statistical department has been at work and reports that two weeks ago was a fairly tough one for the theater owners. Reason given is something to do with weather that no one wanted to miss.

Now the curious part of this saga is that no sooner had "The Lady Eve" departed the Palace than everyone began to mutter "What has happened to The Lady Eve Sidwich and her disreputable pals? What has become of that trusting hero named Pike, after "The Ale That Won for Yale? What ever happened to that honeymoon scene which ended with the groom jumping off the train at the first whistle stop?"

So, the obvious thing was to get it back and this morning is the time.

In the event you hadn't heard, all this palaver relates to Preston Sturges' gay little picture about the lady card-sharp whose cleverness is her effortless weapon. Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda are the stars of the comedy, with Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette and Eric Blore being their very funniest, which is very funny indeed.

It's too bad to spoil any of your fun by hinting the details of the Lady Eve's conquests. Suffice it to say, she's a knowing sinner, she gets the most eligible man on a South American steamer by the simple method of tripping him up and finally she makes him think she's two different people.

Brightened by that same freshness of dialogue which made "The Great McGinty" and "Christmas in July" such titilating films, "The Lady Eve" owes its facile wit to Author-Director Sturges. It is remarkably well pieced together and enjoys the further services of a distinguished cast. Besides the wits already mentioned, there are on hand William Demarest, Melville Cooper, Janet Beecher, Martha O'Driscoll, Robert Grieg and Luis Alberni.

If you've been telephoning this desk to ask when "The Lady Eve" would return, this is your answer. She's at the Columbia waiting for you.—R. L. C.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 30.

PRIZE: Herman Shumlin—who produced and directed the current hits, "The Corn Is Green" and "Watch on the Rhine"—was backstage at the National Theater Tuesday night, when he learned that both plays had won the Drama Critics Circle Prize . . . Shumlin was busy at the time, rehearsing some of the cast of "The Corn Is Green"—although the show has been a hit for many months—because he wanted their performances to remain fresh . . . Just as he was about to rehearse the third act, Shumlin was called to the phone—and learned of the prizes. He reported this to the cast, and then told Thelma Schnee, "Now let's go on with the third act . . . "As long as you won both prizes," Miss Schnee suggested, "how about taking time off, to celebrate?" . . . "Oh no, let's continue rehearsing," replied Shumlin. "That's how I won both prizes."

LEONARD LYONS

KINSHIP: When W. Somerset Maugham was in San Francisco recently, he was asked to autograph one of his books—for a local dealer. Maugham obliged, and the next day the happy dealer sent the author a box of cigars . . . A few days after Maugham returned to New York City he received a phone call from a man who was eager to meet him. "You remember the dealer in San Francisco," the stranger identified—"the one who sent you a box of cigars after you autographed his book? Well, I'm that man's brother" . . . "Frankly," said Maugham, as he hung up, "I don't think the relationship is close enough."

ENTERPRISE: Douglas Leigh, whose illuminated signs now decorate all of Broadway, was a college classmate of Sam Byrd, the actor-producer. They came to Broadway almost simultaneously, determined to match each other's success. When Byrd—after a long appearance in "Tobacco Road"—produced his own show, Leigh made the electric sign for him . . . Last month Leigh contracted to write his autobiography—although he's still under 39—for a N. Y. publisher. Last week Byrd came to his office, placed a publishing contract and a dime in front of Leigh, and said: "I not only match you, but I beat you" . . . The contract was for the publication of Byrd's book, "Small Town South." The dime was a deposit paid by the man who reserved the first copy—another writer, named Sinclair Lewis.

SONG: After an absence of more than four months, Eddie Davis will return to Leon & Eddie's on Friday. Davis' long absence from his night club resulted from an ear ailment, which impaired his hearing. A delicate operation cured him of the plight which threatened to end his long career . . . When the operation was over Eddie's nurse told him: "I've seen you at Leon & Eddie's many times. I've often wondered how you—with such a nice face—could sing such daring songs?" . . . "Well, now you know why," Eddie assured, "I just couldn't hear what I was singing."

SUCCESS: Last Friday the Experimental Theater presented George Corey's "Not in Our Stars." A director went backstage late to get Corey's signature to a contract for a Broadway presentation. "I think you're too late," the director was told. "Three producers are talking to Corey right now. They're Dwight Wiman, William A. Brady and You-Know-Who." The latter is the senior member of an old, powerful producing firm . . . "Where's Corey now?" the director asked . . . "There he is—against the wall," was the answer . . . "If he's against the wall," sighed the director, as he left, "then You-Know-Who must have him."

LAMENT: Jackie Webb, of the Vanderbilt clan, enlisted for a three-year hitch in the Air Corps. He now is stationed in California. His uniform consists of a hat, shirt, tie and trousers—but no jacket except for a leather one which is used only in unexpected cold weather . . . Webb flew to N. Y. last week-end. He went to the night clubs, but couldn't get past the inner rope—because he wasn't wearing a jacket. And so the Vanderbilt kinsman sipped his beer in the outer lobbies, explaining to all his friends that he might try to arrange for a transfer to a cold-weather station, where the uniforms include jackets—so that he may get by the night-club doors.

AMITY: Clay Bryson, the handsome young vocalist at Jack Dempsey's Broadway restaurant, conducted his own orchestra until recently. One of his best friends among the bandleaders was Blue Steele. Last August, when Bryson's band was scheduled to appear in Des Moines, his musicians suffered an auto mishap en route. Bryson was able to fulfill that engagement, when Blue Steele volunteered the use of his own orchestra . . . On April 26, Steele was prosecuted in Monroe, La.—charged with assaulting a Federal officer. He was convicted and sentenced to Atlanta . . . The man whose eloquence convicted Steele was District Attorney Albert Bryson—brother of Steele's friend, Clay Bryson.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 30 (INS).—Judy Garland from now on will step out of the little girl roles and assume the status of a grown woman with all the romance, experience and glamour of any M.-G.-M.'s other femme stars. Her romance in real life with Dave Rose has made not only the studio but all the movie fans conscious that Judy is growing up. So her first prize package as a glamour girl will be "As Thousands Cheer," the Irving Berlin-Moss Hart musical. She'll be starred in it after she finishes "Babes on Broadway," with her favorite movie partner, Mickey Rooney.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Speaking of Mickey he is doing some growing up himself and carrying a torch as big as a lighthouse for Linda Darnell. He actually wanted to slip an engagement ring on her finger but the lady said "No"—at least for the time being. The Deanna Durbin-Vaughn Paul wedding seems to have started all sorts of marriage rumors in the juvenile set, involving Mickey and Linda, Judy and Dave Rose and Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville. But they're all such youngsters they can afford to wait awhile.

Hal Wallis spent all this morning in a Warner projection room looking at the very long test Robert Cummings made for "Kings Row"—and when he came out the part was Bob's. The role of Parris—for which Warners moved heaven and earth to get Ty Power—is one of the plums of the year and should put Bob right up in the starring class. Not since "Spring Parade," with Deanna Durbin, has he had a role worthy of him. The lineup now for this popular novel is Cummings, Ronald Reagan, as Drake, and Annie Sheridan as the girl Randy. Of course, Bob Cummings is being borrowed from Universal for the Warner picture.

While Myrna Loy and Arthur Hornblow are vacationing in New York, her movie side-kick, Bill Powell and Diana Lewis will arrive there in time to see some of the new shows with them. Judging from the way M-G-M is rushing a new script for Myrna and Bill, I'd say they'd better have fun while they can. The minute they return they go into "Shadow of the Thin Man," another one of the Mr. and Mrs. detective yarns so popular with the fans. There was a time, while Myrna and Arthur Hornblow were separated, that Metro was thinking of calling off this series because of the kickback in the "perfect wife" advertising, but that's all a thing of the past now.

Chatter in Hollywood: Marlene Dietrich is having a time for herself with that psychometer discovered by Prof. Joseph Cattron for measuring emotion. When a San Francisco State College boy, Bob Moore, failed to react properly when kissed by Several pretty co-eds, he was brought down to Hollywood as a Dietrich experiment—and Bob's "reactions" almost broke the machine. Now Marlene has borrowed the contraption to take home. She says she's going to try it out on Jean Gabin.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Bill Wellman is passing out cigars over the arrival of Timothy Wellman today at St. Vincent's Hospital. This makes two boys and two girls for the Wellmans; Elaine Barrie, in the largest red hat of the season, at the Scheherazade with Pepi d'Albrew; Dorothy Lee and Eddie Norris have discovered each other. How that boy gets around; Arline Judge says it isn't true that Jack Dempsey is the big moment in her life. She has seen him only once since he's been in town.

Madeleine Carroll, silent as the sphinx about her New York heartbeat, in town for two weeks before joining the "Dildo Kay" troupe on Location in the Bahamas; Buddy Westmore has joined the Naval Reserves in the photographic division; Helen Vinson, the former Mrs. Fred Perry, and Philip Reed, a new duet at the Mocambo; at the same place Jinx Falkenberg and Charlie Grayson; the "Ice-Capades" continue to have as many stars in the boxes as on the ice. Betty Grable, her first night out of the hospital was there with—guess who? Also in the crowd were Ilona Massey and Alan Curtis and Milton Berle, stagging it.

Mitzi Green, looking like a glamour girl at the Rhum-Boogie with Dan Dailey, jr.; Roz Russell startling the town with new "night and day" earrings. They're diamonds on one side and sapphires on the other and can be worn with either side out; Nat Wolfe has taken his British bride, Edna Best, to Las Vegas to show her real American ranch life; Conrad Nagel concentrating on Rosalie Graybar at the Brown Derby.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

A Reminder

DOROTHY LAMOUR

and her arms and legs, in case you had forgotten, as she will be seen in one of Buddy DeSylva's new productions for Paramount, probably costarring Bob hope

Little

It's "Blackout" at the Little for the second week, with the latest of the British war thrillers continuing the parade of who's who in the espionage service.

Conrad Veidt, shorn this time of his monocle and Prussian boots, plays a keen Danish sea captain whose vessel is detained by Contraband Control. One of his passengers, a Mata Hari in tailored tweeds, incites his curiosity and when she slips ashore he feels constrained to follow. A darkened train takes them to London and an evening of adventure the sea-loving captain will long remember.

While it lacks the tortuous suspense of "Night Train" and the wry humor of "The Lady Vanishes," best of the espionage school, "Blackout" nonetheless holds an air of mystery and atmosphere of imminent devastation that's fascinating to watch. Michael Powell, who directed "The Edge of the World" with such attention to atmospheric success is responsible for the fineness of this detail. Valerie Hobson has the feminine lead in the all-British supporting cast.

The always effective sea scenes were filmed through the cooperation of the Royal British Navy.

Starlet's Lessons

Still another item has been added to the training schedule for Kathryn Grayson, young singer who made her screen debut in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary." Kathryn now is taking ballet lessons and expects to enroll in a tap dancing class within a fortnight.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 30.

It would knock our producers for a loop if they attended a meeting of the Women's Motion Picture Council, as I did.

HOPPER

This group represents the voice of the people. What I had to say, at their invitation, was unimportant compared with what I learned from them. They report to their fellow club members on all pictures, and make their recommendations. When a member asked if she could obtain a list of those film folk who signed a petition protesting the deportation of Harry Bridges, there was a round of applause. "And when we get that list," said she, "the theater managers will be notified that the pictures in which those actors appear will be boycotted by us." Atta girl!

Nor do they approve of the modern methods, either in life or on the screen, endorsing mob psychology, even though it's done from a humorous standpoint, as it was in "The Devil and Miss Jones." Condoning lawbreakers and strikers' brutality doesn't set well, nor is it swallowed whole by our drafted boys in camps around the country. These women pull no punches in their discussions. They want to bring back moral fiber on the screen as well as in our way of life, because only through attacking an evil honestly will you ever arrive at a true solution.

Another thing that irks them is having stars accept their invitations, then never show up nor offer an apology . . . It's well for us to take time out once in a while and find out how the other fellow reacts. After all, it's the public that pays and pays and pays.

Dr. Cotton, of Stanford, declares that sex appeal can be scientifically measured in units of manpower, just as motors are measured in terms of horse power. Well, will wonders never cease! All we need now, girls, is for someone to come forth with a super-charger to be worn in our corsage. Tests were made by Dr. Cotton by throwing pictures of our stars on a screen before his class of students. Everyone was horrified when Hedy Lamarr came through with a score of only 37 out of a 100—until they discovered she'd blown a gasket in the testing machine!

When Walt Disney and Sam Goldwyn's picture is finished, the theaters will have to build larger marquees for "The Life and Stories of Hans Christian Andersen."

Bud Schulberg, under contract to Goldwyn, was called in for a conference, but said, "Sorry, Mr. Goldwyn, but I have to make a lecture at a book club on 'What Makes Sammy Run.'" Then, changing into a clean shirt, he ran to keep the appointment, and discovered not one soul present. He happened to be one week ahead of time!

Wonder why Lady Mendl couldn't delay her New York trip until after the "Chins Up" party, which had been so widely advertised, was given. Lady Furness did a whale of a job trying to save it.

Now that they've built Jeanette MacDonald and Lana Turner up as glamour girls, they're about to be deglamourized. Jeanette has to dress in the uniform of 1915 in "Smilin' Through," and Lana in any old thing in "Honky Tonk." Well, any old thing will look well on her.

Talk about "Modes of the Moment!" Well, at Mac Nisbett's charming hillside home last night I learned to eat with chop-sticks in one easy lesson. And it's a good thing I caught on, 'cause with that marvelous 18-course Chinese dinner that his lovely wife prepared herself, if my chop-sticks hadn't worked, I'd have gone right into my "two-finger poi" Hawaiian routine!

$50,000,000 Props Used Free in Film

Filmdom's most expensive props, $50,000,000 worth of fighting planes, were used in a single motion picture scene—and didn't cost a cent.

The picture was "Dive Bomber," being made by Warner Bros. at the United States naval air base in San Diago. Most of the planes were the huge PBY3 Consolidated bombers. The others were interceptors, torpedo bombers, dive bombers and plane-carrier craft with folding wings.

Mr. Othman Finds JohnHoward Younger Than He Had Thought

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, April 30.—For nearly four years now we've been enjoying the performances on the screen of John Howard, a middle-aged actor, and we've chatted with him briefly whenever we'd bump into him on a movie set.

But we never got around to doing a story about him until today when we found him on an R-K-O stage not middle-aged at all. He had, in fact, just celebrated his twenty-eighth birthday.

All these years he's been places in the movies and it's no compliment to us as a reporter for having ignored him so long. When we first came to town in 1937, there was Howard at Paramount, playing Bulldog Drummond, the detective, with John Barrymore and Louise Campbell. (And whatever happened to Louise? We thought she was a fine actress, and beautiful, too.)

Anyhow, Howard was earning $750 a week in those days. Peanuts! A lot of indifferent actors earn that much. You don't pay 'em much mind.

Now lok at Howard. He's under contract to Universal for two pictures a year and to Columbia for two more. He also makes a couple more at his own convenience—and he earns $2,500 a week. Every six days he gets as much as most people earn in a year. He must be good.

Made Invisible Love

He was the movie actor who made a human being out of the coal mine owner in "The Philadelphia Story." He made love to "The Invisible Woman." He's played in a lot of pictures lately, and he's done well by them all.

Interesting thing about Howard to you movie fans, probably, is that he's one of the few genuine bachelors in the picture acting trade.

Howard lives with his mother and father, though there's no telling how much longer he will be. He's not talking, but he's spending most of his spare evenings these days with Hedy Lamarr. Their friends think maybe they'll be getting married a few months hence. (We're making no predictions. We've got no confirmation from him, or her, either. And we'll leave the romance department to the experts in that line).

Singer and Dancer, Off Set

Young Howard was born in Cleveland and earned his way through Western Reserve University as a trap drummer and orchestral leader. He also did some hoofing in Cleveland night clubs and he made considerable money for Ohio radio stations.

He hasn't done any dancing in the movies. Neither has he sung a note, except for some extraneous bathtub humming at the insistence of assorted directors. He said he believes he's better off by sticking to straight acting.

Right now he's playing with Adolph Menjou, Florence Rice, Gloria Swanson and Neil Hamilton in what looks as if it might be one of the year's funniest pictures, "Father Takes a Wife." Menjou is father. Miss Swanson is the wife. Son John has his troubles trying to rectify the romantic trouble of his pappy.

A Passionate Pianist Searches for the Lost Chord

have a knotty problem to solve in "The Great Lie," which opens on the Metropolitan screen tomorrow morning after a two-week engagement at the Earle. Two males are the ladies' point of disagreement, the one George Brent, the other a year-old baby. Miss Davis is a quiet Maryland girl, while Miss Astor has the role of a worldly, celebrated pianist and mother of the fought-for child. The rich personal success scored by Miss Astor as "the other woman" has raised talk of a future film for her with Miss Davis. Lucille Watson, Grant Mitchell and Hattie McDaniel are featured in the current picture

MacBride Role

Donald MacBride has been cast as "Pinky" Grayson in the new William Powell-Myrna Loy comedy, "Love Crazy."

Shirley's Pride

Pete Smith Dances

Pete Smith turns to dancing with his newest specialty for M-G-M. The commentator star will demonstrate the "do's and "don'ts" of dancing, which will include the rumba and La Conga, as well as the waltz and fox trot.

Fan's Letter Was Horse on Tobias

A candidate for the oddest fan mail request is offered by George Tobias.

John W. Miller jr., of Berkeley Springs, West Virginia, and a friend, saw a picture of Tobias exhibiting one of his horses to the cast of his new film, "Affectionately Yours." In the picture the horse was giving the actor a very toothy "smile"—in other words, a horse laugh.

"We had an argument over the horse's age, as shown by its teeth," Miller wrote. "Will you please tell us how old it is?"

New Way Found To Crash Films

Want to crash the movies? Then don't put too much stock in dramatics but concentrate on impersonations instead.

This unorthodox advice was offered by William Orr when he completed his most important film role to date, in "Thieves Fall Out."

"I know it sounds phoney," said Bill, "but look at me. I worked several years with stock companies and nothing happened. Then I took a temporary job with the "meet the People" revue as an impersonator. Within three months, I received seven film offers."

"Poor Man's" Taxes

Secretary Morgenthau's uncompromising opposition to taxes on essential foodstuffs, such as coffee, tea and sugar, as a levy on the "poor man's table" would be justifiable under normal conditions. But the times are very far from normal, as was indicated by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones in his address before the United States Chamber of Commerce. Citing an estimate that one-fourth of the normal man power working hours of the country will have to be devoted to production for defense purposes, Mr. Jones said: "That means that one hour out of every four must be taken from the production and manufacture of the things we use in our normal everyday life." If we consider the cost of defense realistically, as Mr. Jones does, in terms of labor and material things, we cannot fail to realize that everybody must make sacrifices—the poor man as well as the rich one—to achieve our defense objectives. That being the case, the tax program ought to place the burden of defense openly and honestly upon the shoulders of all the people, by taxing now exempt incomes, and by increased levies upon articles of mass consumption, either in the form of taxes on articles of necessity or general sales taxes.

The Treasury program, moreover, is admittedly designed to prevent a general rise in prices by cutting down consumption in addition to raising revenue. But how can price increases be checked if the great majority of wage earners continue to be exempt from payment of income taxes and also escape payment of taxes upon basic necessities? The Treasury program "puts the screws" upon a limited group of taxpayers in the lower and middle taxable income brackets without exacting anything approaching equality of sacrifice from individuals in the exempt income groups. Instead of equalizing tax burdens with some reference to ability to pay, the Treasury plan would increase existing inequalities and likewise take away the surplus income of the very groups whose savings are expected to provide a large part of the funds for purchasing defense bonds.

Braves New World

It seems that the stockholders of the National League baseball club of Boston have decided to abolish the nickname "Bees" and to reverd to the more euphonious and inspiriting name of "Braves." That is the name the club wore in the years prior to 1936. It is the name by which it was known in that year of miracles, 1914, when the late Mr. Stallings urged on his players in their dizzy climb from the bottom of the league to the championship of the world. The idea of rechristening the Boston team as the "Bees" originated, it appears, not with the management and certainly not with the players but with the sports writers. This is another illustration of the influence of typography on language. The word "Bees" was not favored for any onomatopoeic or metaphorical suggestion, but solely for the convenience of headline writers.

It was a similar motive which years ago prompted the New York American League club to naturalize its name from "Highlanders" into "Yankees." You can see for yourself that "Highlanders" required quite a mouthful of anybody's Gothic or Cheltenham bold italic. Perhaps there might also have been some idea that a club so named should properly dress its players in kilts. Much the same considerations, doubtless, govern the increasing tendency to refer to our own Washington club as the "Nats" rather than the "Senators." Of course, contrary tendencies can also be noted, as when, for example, the Cleveland club lengthened its name from "Naps" to "Indians" after the passing of the illustrious Napoleon Lajoie. Similarly, the departure of the late Wilbert Robinson from Brooklyn was followed by a reversion from "Robins" to the more ancient name of "Dodgers," thereby adding an extra unit and a half of type. But even that designation is an abbreviation of "Trolley Dodgers," a derisive reference to the former hazards of life on the far side of the East River.

But, aside from typographic considerations, choosing a name for a ball club is evidently a more delicate business than you would suspect. The St. Louis Cardinals, for example, were named for the bird whose plumage corresponds to their own. The bird, of course, owes its name to an association with the color of the cassocks and hats worn by princes of the church. But the word cardinal itself is derived from a Latin one meaning merely "hinge" or "turning point." Fearful, however, that somewhere along this line of association offense might be given to religious sensibilities, a Philadelphia newspaper once ordered its baseball writers and its sports desk copyreaders to edit the word into "Red Birds" whenever and wherever it might appear.

Fabian Way

The President's elaboration of the duties and extent of the reconnaissance patrols will not quiet the speculation which his original statement aroused. There may be nothing new in the idea of patrolling. It may be conformable with the neutrality statutes. It may be necessary in the interests of hemispherical defense. But the fact remains that the manner of the White House statements on patrols gives the impression to the general public that patrolling is the first step to convoying; in fact, that patrolling will imperceptibly drift into convoying.

Much as we hope that this impression is correct, we feel that it would have been much better if this problem had been more forthrightly handled at the outset. The essence of statesmanship is foresight. In this matter it should have been foreseen that the overwhelming backing for aid to Britain made the delivery of the aid not only logical but also, in view of the submarine menace, inevitable. Thus the prospect of convoying should have been envisaged, if not declared, at the moment that we decided to obliterate the dollar mark in our aid and to make that aid all-out. Instead the President, in a conversational moment, said two months ago that convoying meant shooting and shooting came close to war. Perhaps he uttered the remark in a questioning way, as if to get the country prepared for trouble. But the truth is that the remark stymied the carrying out of a policy to its logical conclusion.

In international law, as a matter of fact, convoying is not necessarily a warlike act. It would be warlike if we tried to run an effective blockade. But there is no effective blockade around Britain, and in these circumstances we have every right under international law to see that our goods are delivered to Britain. The Nazis, of course, may start shooting. But in a world in which there are no commonly held rules and where no holds are barred, shooting does not necessarily mean war. It takes two to make war, and there is nothing either in the precedents or in the pathology of Hitlerism to show that Hitler will ever be forced into declaring war upon the United States. Indeed, experience shows that Hitler forces into war nations which are least provocative! There is no moral to be drawn from such an experience other than that Hitler simply runs his war schedule without regard to the actions of his prospective victims.

It is the carrying out of our national policy, however, that must determine the issue of convoying. We are fast committed to the cause for which Britain is fighting. And the reason is that Britain stands between us and a tyrant who cannot attain his ambition to run the world till he has stamped out our power and our freedom as the world's greatest democracy. He could not enjoy his own power otherwise, and he could never accustom to their chains the nations which he has made his vassals, and the subjects he has made his slaves, otherwise. Thus our choice is crystal clear. Either we shore up the barrier against Hitler in fighting Britain and in the British navy or we wait for Hitler to try conclusions with us alone.

It requires no further argument at this late day to show how relatively weak would be our position when set against a Japo-Hitler world. A Hitler Europe, plus a Hitler Africa, with Russia, Latin America and a Japanized Asia thrown in—such a combination would leave us weak and vulnerable. Now, however, we and the British and the Chinese have the preponderance of strength. Let us, then, exert it while we have it. Elementary prudence requires that we deliver our aid to Britain, and, moreover, do anything more that is necessary to crush the terrible scourge which is threatening our country, our prosperity, our interests, our institutions, our civilization. Otherwise we shall join the long procession of democracies upon which Hitler counted to defeat themselves.

Bouquet For NDMB

After successfully mediating the strike in the steel works of John L. Roebling Sons Co. Tuesday, the National Defense Mediation Board was thanked by both parties in the dispute for its labors. The compliment marked the settlement of merely one case. But the board, in its six weeks of existence, has chalked up 17 such successes, out of 22 cases. One, the coal strike, was settled outside the board, after the board's mediators had failed to win agreement. Thus the board's docket contains only four unsolved cases. The record is the more gratifying because the cases that come up for mediation are certified only after being given up as insoluble by other agencies of the Government. Responsibility for keeping at work or returning to work 205,000 men must persuade every member of the board that he is making a vital contribution to national defense.

Russia Locks The Door

Eighteen months ago Winston Churchill described Soviet Russia as a "riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma." He ventured to guess, however, that it could not be "in accordance with the interest or the safety of Russia that Germany should plant herself upon the shores of the Black Sea, or that it should overrun the Balkan states and subjugate the Slavonic peoples of southeastern Europe." That, he said, "would be contrary to the historic life interests of Russia." Yet that is precisely what has since happened. Hitlerism has overrun the Balkan states, established itself on the shores of the Black Sea, subjugated the Slavonic peoples of southeastern Europe, and now even threatens to seize the Dardanelles. Yet the only opposition manifested by the Kremlin to these moves has taken the form either of futile gestures of protest to Hungary and Bulgaria or equally futile words of encouragement to Yugoslavia. The same acquiescence in Hitlerism is to be noted in the Far East. Moscow has gone out of its way recently in a neutrality treaty with Japan, to encourage Hitler's Asiatic partner, and at the same time to strike a blow at China, Great Britain and the United States. All this might seem astonishing in view of the fact that the greatest menace to Russia's security is the Axis and particularly Germany.

This fact, of course, is undoubtedly clear to Stalin. It is, consequently, a fair assumption that his moves vis-a-vis Germany have been moves not from strength but from weakness. Yet with each passing day the German menace to the Soviet Union looms larger, and has produced such fear in Moscow that the Russians have actually scared up a baseless report of a Nazi expeditionary force coming from Finland. Is it to indicate the Kremlin's anxiety about the direction of German moves that Russia has now imposed a ban on the transshipment of war materials across Soviet territory? This is not at all impossible. Yet the present edict may also be a case of locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen. For months after the war began Russia willingly permitted important supplies of raw materials to move across the Transiberian Railroad to Germany even while insisting that these supplies, much of American origin, were for her own use. Undoubtedly some of these supplies are badly needed by Russia, particularly machine tools. Perhaps Russia is gambling that one consequence of the present decree will be to persuade the United States that she is no longer willing to serve as a means by which the British blockade is circumvented in Germany's favor. Thereby Moscow might hope to demonstrate that it is safe for the United States to permit a flow of indispensable war material from this country to the Soviet Union.

In other words, Russia seems to have discovered that, by having served Germany, whether out of fear of the Reich or in pursuit of a calculated policy of prolonging the war, she has gravely damaged her own interests. She may now be attempting to undo the harm she did by giving aid and comfort to the Reich. It is pretty late, however, for a volte-face, and, in fact, what has been done so far is not a volte-face. Russia's anti-German moves have been far from impressive to date. Her pro-German actions have been far more significant. The ban on the transshipment of arms across Russia, accordingly, can arouse nothing but skepticism in this country or in Great Britain. This is the penalty for carrying water on both shoulders, a policy, if that's the word, which may end in Stalin ultimately finding himself with no water and a lot of welts.

Club For Girls

Mrs. Roosevelt recently indicated the part that girls may eventually have to play in national defense with her suggestion for a draft. No matter how they may feel about a plan of that nature, Washingtonians will watch with great interest the formation of the Georgetown Girls' Club. Boys' clubs have already met with such universal success, not only in the District but throughout the country, that it is to be wondered that similar projects have not previously been tried here for girls. The proposal, which has an imposing list of sponsors, calls for a three-year program, which should guarantee it a fair trial, and covers a broad recreational and training field. Local organizations promise their cooperation, and a building has been donated. Let us hope that the campaign for the $10,000 subscription which started day before yesterday will proceed as smoothly as present results indicate.

Army Preparations

The charge recently made by Chairman Truman of the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that the War Department has been "derelict" in not preparing adequate housing plans is a very serious charge.

It is serious in the sense that apparently an important branch of the Army has been caught partly asleep. And this charge cannot but make the public want to know if on other vital phases of mobilization the Army staff is also unprepared. These men are hired by the taxpayers of this country, paid well during service and retired on a generous allowance. It is fair that the public expect such officers to provide for emergencies.

If over a 23-year period the War Department cannot avoid mistakes reported at Camp Meade and the camp in Florida, the officers directly responsible would seem to be unsuited to handling the speed of modern war preparations. Blitzkriegs will not wait for games to be finished on the golf links of Washington.

"Not enough time," "not enough funds," "this is different from that which we expected!" Such reported explanations sound tragically similar to those made by some army officers of countries swiftly crushed by Germany. The next mistake might well involve human lives and not building materials or ground sites. The Senate investigation should be most searching wherever it leads. V. J. WYCKOFF.

Choice For U. S.

Here in America we talk and act in terms of years. The truth is that the fate not of Britain alone but of America and our whole civilization will be decided in the next few months.

Hitler has declared that this war is "a decisive battle between two enemy worlds." The question for America is no longer, "Must we fight?" Our only choice is whether we shall fight now, with a powerful ally and her all-important fleet on our side, or wait until Britain is defeated and we have to fight alone against the whole totalitarian world.

GEORGE C. WOLLMAN.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.

Halfway Nation?

Are we to go down in history as a halfway nation which did a halfway job of helping England defeat Hitlerism? I wish one of your readers would explain just how our seven billions in supplies will aid the British if such supplies never reach their destination.

Make no mistake, there is no such thing as neutrality any more. The day that Hitler broke his solemn pledge by conquering the Czechs, the spirit of neutrality sickened throughout the world; when the Germanic hordes continued their aggressions by enslaving the Poles, the spirit of neutrality gave its last gasp and expired, completely and irredeemably. And I hope that by this time our isolationist friends in Congress will realize that Hitler needs no excuse to attack this or any other nation C. R. G.

For A Lottery

Now is the time for Congress to get busy and pass a national lottery bill. With four lotteries a year, the Government could clear yearly a billion. A billion is not to be sneezed at during this time of need, besides we would all have a little fun and excitement. Goodness knows we could stand some these trying days, and it would be for a good cause. I feel the so-called "straight-laced" people could stretch a point and put aside their scruples when they realize how greatly this billion is needed. We must be bigger than we are. MRS. C. MOORE.

Making Democracy Work

Ernest Lindley's article, "Negroes in Defense," which appeared in The Post recently, is (to colored people as well as those sincere liberals who want justice and freedom to work, for all as a prerequisite to real democracy), at once encouraging and heartening; like the very factual approach to the Duncan Aikman articles on "The Unready Republic," Mr. Lindley has trained the light of publicity on one of the darknesses of democracy.

Mr. Lindley merits high acclaim for his social perceptions as a journalist. In this particular instance, moreover, his usual merit bears the stamp of patriotism of a high character, because his writing on the discrimination of Negroes in defense is a warning and admonition that America cannot have economic slaves or serfs in its own back yard while the President fervently declares before the world that all American resources shall be directed to the end that democracy shall not perish from the earth.

More and more American democracy in the days to come will need more and more journalists like Mr. Lindley. It is not only for us as Negroes that America will need Mr. Lindleys. But because the times will demand that we shall all have to face all problems regardless of how distasteful or disagreeable they may be to our personal prejudices. That is democracy. And democracy is no stronger than the weakest link of the problem it refuses to see and dissipate.

CLARENCE TOLLIVER.

Washington, April 28.

Permit me to thank you for publishing Ernest K. Lindley's article on "Discrimination In All-Out Effort," in which the author depicted the plight of the Negroes in defense.

The employment of Negroes in defense production should not be a ticklish problem, no more than the employment of Jews, Greeks, Swedes, Finns and other members of minority groups. The Negro represents the largest minority group in this country and should be the last to be discriminated against when the country needs more workers and less strikers.

In these times we need faithful and trustworthy workers; no group has excelled the Negro in these two virtues. The Negro was brought to this country to work; why should he be denied that privilege now? Mr. Hillman should see to it that the Negro gets a chance, for he is an integral part of this country and should share like all other groups in the all-out effort.

Radio Troubles

When the "Radio Survey" calls up of a morning to ask "Were you listening?" the answer is, "No!" The reason? Choppiness and the radio advertising. It was bad enough when they began two-timing us with that swift, intermittent male and female harranguing about the qaulities of something or other, but now the "transcribed announcement" that bursts into the middle of everything is the firecracker frosting on the auditory hodgepodge and we give up!

Frenzy seems to have become the keynote of radio. And pretty soon we'll all be getting the F. C. C. to see about it. In this country the air belongs to the people—yet! What is there about soap, for example to get so excited about? It keeps you clean behind the ears and a few things like that, but that's no reason for blowing a bar of soap up bigger than the whale it was made from. With the vehemence of some of these advertisers, we all but duck to dodge a box on the ears. In fact if we could get enough of them after Hitler instead of after us, our defense problems might soon be solved. CLARA LOUISE JOHN.

Considers America's Choice

With America hesitating on the brink of complete involvement in war, is not this a moment to face squarely the full implications of our stand? We are a Christian nation, we say, of democratic government. To assure ourselves of the continued blessings of these institutions and the principles on which they are founded we will make any effort—even unto death. We will kill or be killed that these principles may survive.

Have we not been wallowing in an orgy of righteous patriotism—shouting grandly of our eagerness to make this supreme sacrifice in the name of democracy and Christianity?

Hitler has challenged those principles; mocked them; predicted their destruction. "Might is right," he proclaims, and acts accordingly.

Let us not deceive ourselves—we cannot go out under arms without admitting that Hitler is right. We cannot fight to defend a way of life whose watchwords are "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." In the very act of fighting we shall have destroyed that way of life, declared to all the world that we do not believe that way will work either.

Let us be honest and face it squarely. In resorting to violence to promote our ideas of right, we are not removed one jot or tittle from the jungle tiger who fights its way in blood to security and survival. Our motives are no grander, our hatred and our anger no more pure because we have language in which to clothe them and intricacies of thought with which to conceal or justify them.

The instinct which kills to make itself secure is no more glorious now than when the dinosaurs roamed primeval forests, and no logic, no eloquence, no subterfuge can change this truth. If this is to be our will and our way, let us say so now. But let us not complain that there is no peace on earth. We have willed it so. It was a voluntary decision which we made with open eyes. Let us not flinch if it turns upon us and rends us.

Perhaps we feel the Christian way of turning the other cheek and loving our enemies is to be deferred until we are sure that having turned the other cheek it will not be smitten. Perhaps we are deferring the complete practice of that which we profess until violence has disappeared from the earth and "the world is ready for it." But Jesus came into a sterner world than that which Nazilism has created, and his followers faced unflinchingly persecutions and abuses which have never been surpassed. The Christian doctrine was forged by a conquered and enslaved race in the furnace of oppression. It has nothing to fear from any conqueror.

Were we Christian truly, the great test of courage to us would be not in our ability to do as Hitler does and do it faster, but in the way of Jesus to live out our professed principles in the white heat of persecution and prove that they do work. Until we can stand that, let us not boast of courage. Until we can believe in that way as practical, we do, in the end, stand with Hitler, as to where the worth of this world lies and how it is to be obtained. J. H.

The Post Impressionist

Mr. Pepys' May Day

Unlike Herrick's Clorinda, Mr. Pepys was no slug-a-bed on May 1, 1669. He was up "betimes," as he noted in his diary, and ebullient with expectation. This was the first May Day that he and Mrs. Pepys would encircle the Grand Tour in Hyde Park in their own coach, driven by their own coachmen. On May Day all London paraded around the Grand Tour or Ring as it was called. The people of importance riding in their private coaches; the less fortunate on horseback or in hired hackneys. Mr. Pepys was at last a man of prominence. He was soon to be Secretary of the Admiralty and felt that he was justified in some extravagances.

He had been unknown and poor in 1655 when he had married Elizabeth St. Michel, a girl of 15, a beauty but portionless. Mr. Pepys had no intention, though, of remaining obscure. His great object was to get on and "to put money in his purse." By 1662 he was able to call himself "a very rising man." He had been appointed Clerk of the Acts—a position that called for a "capable accomptant, well versed in naval affairs." That he knew little of accounting and even less of the navy did not daunt him.

Although he had his degree of B. A. from Magdalene College and could converse in Latin, French and Spanish, he had never been inducted into the mysteries of the multiplication tables. They intrigued but baffled him for a time. "Arithmetique," fortunately, proved interesting, and many mornings he was up at 4 o'clock to study. Accountancy being finally mastered, he turned his attention to naval affairs, in which he soon became proficient. He was later to write his notable "Memoirs Relating to the State of the Royal Navy."

But it is now 1669 and Mr. Pepys had already gone far. His success in life had not been left to chance nor were his preparations for May Day haphazard.

Although his coach had been brand new in December and he had written gratefully at that time: "Abroad with my wife, the first time that ever I rode in my own coach, which do make my heart rejoice," he had nevertheless, taken it to the coachmakers on April 19 to have it "new painted and the window frames gilt against May Day."

The thirtieth of April found Mr. Pepys particularly busy. First, he stopped at the tailor's to try on his new suit. It was the very finest one that ever he had had, "of flowered tabby vest and colored camelott tunique," with gold lace at the wrists. Then he hurried to the belt-maker's where he bought a belt to match his suit. He looked at periwigs, too, but did not succumb to that temptation. At the cutler's he left his silver-hilt sword to be "a-gilding against tomorrow."

His last errand, of course, was at the coachmaker's. He had taken his coach there for just one more coat of varnish and an oiling. It was to have been finished at 3 o'clock. When he arrived, he found that nothing had been done. Being a man of resources, he sent out for some ale. With the stimulus of the ale and the witchery of his blandishments, the coach was finally finished at 8 o'clock and when he returned home to "find my wife hath been making herself clean against tomorrow. And late as it was I did send my coachmen and horses to fetch home the coach tonight. Myself most weary with walking and standing so much to see all things fine against tomorrow."

When the morning dawned the sky was lowering. With all his planning and proficiency, Mr. Pepys could do nothing about that. His vanity must have suffered. For once, during the shower, while he was standing under shelter on the banks of the Thames, he had watched the King go by in his barge. "Methought," philosophized Mr. Pepys, "it lessened my esteem of a King that he should not be able to command the rain." Under the same circumstances, he now found himself just as impotent.

The scurrying clouds, the sudden gusts of wind, the intermittent spattering of rain could not quench his ardor. So after their midday dinner he and his wife set forth.

Mr. Pepys was very complacent in his corner of the coach—eyeing his coachmen in their new liveries of serge; admiring the bright red ribbons that laced the manes and tails of his horses. The new green reins, also, gave him great satisfaction. "The people did mightily look upon us; and the truth is I did not see any coach more pretty nor more gay than ours all day," he wrote in his diary that night.

But little Mrs. Pepys, who on most occasions was so merry, was very quiet in her corner—almost sullen, thought her husband. Was it because in the midst of all this splendor she was wearing a dress 2 years old? Or did she have a premonition that this was to be her last May Day? That never again was she to see the Strand, the tall May pole with its three gilt crowns garlanded with flowers? That never again would she trip into her garden with silver for the milk maids, who always on May Day delivered their milk in hawthorn-wreathed pots and danced on the green to the music of violins and clarions? Could she know that this was to be the last May that she would steal quietly out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning to go to the fields and there bathe her face and hands in the magic May dew that was certain to make one beautiful?

At any rate, Mr. Pepys had no morbid premonitions. His ornate coach, the gold lace in his sleeves, the envious glances of his acquaintances had all made him very content.

Then, at last, after they had refreshed themselves with syllabub, which cost all of 12 shillings, May Day was over and they were home again. Little Mrs. Pepys to cry herself to sleep, and Mr. Pepys to confide to his diary: "There were so many hackneys in the park as spoiled the sight of the gentlemen's coaches." Thus, so soon, had his own coachless May Days been erased from his memory.

The Axis Terms Of Peace

HAVING RETURNED home after visiting Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin, the Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Matsuoka, has published through a controlled newspaper—the Japan Times Advertiser — the 12 conditions of an Axis peace. They are of the utmost interest and they will surely be studied with the greatest care by the Administration, by Congress and by the Nation. Avowedly, they are addressed to the United States. The 12 conditions laid down by the Japanese publication have been formulated not by a neutral outsider but by Hitler's chief ally. They are issued at a moment when the fortunes of war are running in favor of the Axis and they are timed to take full advantage of the confusion created here by the propaganda of defeat.

LIPPMANN

The Axis conditions of peace remove the last vestige of doubt that in their settlement of the world the Axis powers intend to settle with the United States as well as with Great Britain and China and Russia and Europe. They do not even pretend to subscribe to the view, which is held by so many sincere Americans, that this is a "foreign war" in which America is not involved unless America deliberately and foolishly and unnecessarily involves itself. For though we are not at war, Mr. Matsuoka makes it perfectly clear that we are expected to sign and ratify a treaty of peace in which we surrender not only many of our vital interests but also—and this is the crucial point—our sovereign right of national self-defense.

THE DRASTIC character of the Axis terms will come as such a shock to many Americans that they will wish not to believe that such terms could be or would be demanded of us. They will hope to hear reassuring denials from Japan that the terms outlined in the Japan Times Advertiser are not to be taken seriously; probably, if the disclosure is taken seriously here, the denials will be made in order to reassure us and confuse us for another few weeks.

But let us not be deceived. These terms are not only issued from a high official source but they are, given an Axis victory, self-evident. They are not extravagant: on the contrary, they are the minimum terms of a victorious Axis.

THE FIRST CONDITION, the very first let us observe, is that the United States and Great Britain are to concede naval parity to the Axis—that is to say that we are to slow up our naval construction until Japan and Germany have, in addition to land and air supremacy in Europe, Africa, and Asia, naval parity as well. We are to give up, in short, the one weapon in which we still have superiority—the weapon which determines the command of the two oceans.

Moreover let us note carefully that this "parity" is to exist not between the Axis and the United States with its own two-ocean Navy but between Britain plus the United States and the Axis. This must be read in connection with Mr. Matsuoka's fifth point which is that the continent of Europe is to be surrendered absolutely to Hitler: thus the British part of the British-American naval power is to remain at the mercy of the German air force and submarines. Under these conditions what Mr. Matsuoka calls "parity" would be in fact immense naval superiority. We are not only to sign away our right to build a two-ocean Navy but we are to make ourselves permanently dependent on a British navy based upon the British Isles which are to be under perpetual threat of bombardment, blockade and invasion.

That the Axis terms call for the effective disarmament of the United States is manifest also in several other conditions. Point number two calls for the demilitarization not only of Gibraltar and Singapore but of all United States bases in Alaska, and of all United States bases west of Hawaii. Nor is that all. Point number eight, believe it or not, is that the "stronghold" of Hawaii "be reduced in importance." Thus we are to let the Axis have "parity" in warships—our side of the parity being in part a British fleet under the guns of Germany, and we are to surrender and dismantle or greatly weaken all the oceanic bases from which our inferior fleet can operate.

THE OTHER TERMS of peace must then be studied in the light of this fundamental requirement—namely the acceptance of a naval disarmament which places us in a position of permanent naval inferiority. Let us pass quickly over the terms to be imposed upon the British. They are to retire from the Mediterranean, from the Middle East, and from Africa, are to accept a Hitler Europe as their neighbor across the Straits of Dover, and South Africa is to separate from the British Commonwealth.

Let us come to the terms which are offered us. In the Pacific the Netherlands Indies are to be detached and set adrift and defenseless as are the Philippines. In all the Pacific islands Japanese "advisers" are to be admitted. Australia is to be opened to Japanese immigration.

But our complete retirement from the Pacific behind a weakened Hawaii is by no means all that is asked of us. We are also to surrender the Monroe Doctrine.

POINT NUMBER EIGHT deals with South America. Here the language is slightly veiled, but the meaning, except to the utterly innocent or the willfully blind, is clear as crystal. We are to agree, that is to say we are to sign and ratify a treaty of peace, in which we "undertake not to form hegemony over South America inimical to the Axis and would accord the fullest freedom and equality of opportunity to Germany and her allies in that continental brotherhood."

When Mr. Matsuoka's spokesman tells us we must not form "hegemony" over South America, he means that we must renounce the right under the Monroe Doctrine to intervene if South America is invaded or conquered from within or made into a colony of the Axis. When he demands "the fullest freedom and equality of opportunity to Germany and her allies," he means that we must agree to let the Axis enter South America, infiltrate it, colonize it, and then control it.

THERE IS NOTHING fantastic in these terms, nothing that is not entirely credible. For given the assumptions on which they are based, that we will permit Britain, China, Australia to be defeated, our naval inferiority will be such that the Axis will be quite able to confront us with the choice of fighting alone and unprepared or of accepting the disarmament which Mr. Matsuoka describes and—consequently then—of surrendering our position and our vital interests from Alaska to Hawaii to the Philippines, of renouncing the Monroe Doctrine in the Western Hemisphere.

IT MAY BE ASKED why the Axis powers have chosen this moment to disclose their terms. The answer is in part, no doubt, that victory has exhilarated them. But there is a more calculated reason. They think that this is the moment to confront us with the whole issue because they believe that the Nation is so confused by honest doubt, by defeatist propaganda, and by the lack of clear, firm, and candid leadership that it will not and cannot make a decision.

They have struck hard at us with the intention of paralyzing American public opinion by provoking at once an internal controversy in which some will be frightened into inaction, some will think the terms too big to be credible, others will be so preoccupied by the effort to awaken their fellow citizens that they will have no time or energy to think of the practical measures that need to be taken.

France Denies Giving Nazis Ships

The government of unoccupied France yesterday denied through its embassy here that the Vichy regime has recently handed over a number of French merchant ships to Germany or that refugees have been killed in French detention camps.

Replying to what it said are "certain rumors" that are being "circulated," the embassy said that most of the ships mentioned as being handed over to Germany had in fact been sunk or seized by the Germans.

The embassy also declared that no refugee has ever been killed in the Camp du Vernet and that no Spanish refugees have been handed over to the Spanish government, other than those extradited under normal legal procedures.

It's M-Day For Dollars

The President's Text

The text of President Roosevelt's address last night follows:

Secretary Morgenthau, Postmaster General Walker, Americans everywhere:

One thought is uppermost in my mind as I make grateful acknowledgment of this dual honor. It is that in reserving the first Defense Savings Bond and the first Defense Postal Savings Stamps in the name of the President, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General have given emphasis to the national character of the defense savings campaign. This character of the campaign is national in the best sense of the word—for it is going to reach down, we hope, to the individual and the family in every community, and on every farm, in every State and every possession of the United States.

It is national and homey at the same time. For example, I am buying not 1 stamp but 20 stamps to go into little books for each of my 10 grandchildren. And the first Defense Savings Bond is being made out in the name of Mrs. Roosevelt as beneficiary.

It is fitting that the President in his purchases should be the symbol of the determination of all the people to save and sacrifice in defense of democracy.

In the larger sense, this first defense bond and these first defense stamps reserved to the President, constitute tangible evidence of partnership—a partnership between all of the people and their Government—entered into to safeguard and to perpetuate all those precious freedoms which Government guarantees. In this time of national peril what we all must realize is that the United States Government is you and I and all the other families next door all the way across the country and back again. It is one great partnership.

This evening we are giving thought to the financial structure of our partnership. We are engaged in an all-out effort to perpetuate democracy in the New World by aiding embattled democracy in the Old World. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, America is in full beauty of glorious springtime. And we have eyes to see the beauty of our country this spring as we never saw it in any spring before.

For a great many people are appreciating our blessings the more when they realize what blessings so many other millions of people have lost this spring and last spring—so many millions of people who hoped and prayed and even assumed—taking it for granted that fate would let them live on as they had always lived.

In the few words which I am speaking to my fellow countrymen tonight, I desire above all else to emphasize the thought that in just such measure as we support our Government will it be strong, effective and safe.

Defenses that were adequate ten years ago are today a broken reed. New machines in the air, on the land and on the sea have created a revolution in the conduct of offensive war and defensive war.

Nations and lands safe ten years ago by virtue of the mere fact of distance away from possible aggression have today been overrun by mechanized conquerors. Distance is no longer a guarantee of safety.

Your Government, therefore, is arming, factories spring up, production multiplies—a country-wide unanimous effort of planning and of work.

At this time we add another call—a frank and clear appeal for financial support to pay for our arming, and to pay for the American existence of later generations.

With jobs more plentiful and wages higher, slight sacrifice here, the omission of a few luxuries there, will swell the coffers of our Federal Treasury. The outward and visible tokens of partnership through sacrifice will be the possession of those Defense Bonds and Defense Savings Stamps which are, at the same time, a guarantee of our future security.

Your Government asks that you make this sacrifice. But is it a sacrifice? Is it a sacrifice for us to give dollars when more than a million of our finest young men have been withdrawn from civilian life to accept the discipline of military life in defense of our country? No, sacrifice is not the word. This Defense Savings Program is rather a privilege and an opportunity to share in the defense of all the things we cherish against the threat that is made against them. We must fight this threat wherever it appears; and it can be found at the threshold of every home in America.

Fellow Americans, I ask you to demonstrate again your faith in America by joining me in investing in the new Defense Savings Bonds and Stamps.

Copyright by New York Times

Guard towers at strategic points and other protective devices, including a 7-foot woven wire fence, have been erected by the Bureau of Mines on and around the grounds of the Government's helium plant at Amarillo, Tex., according to a report from Dr. R. B. Sayers, director, to Secretary of the Interior Ickes, made public today.

The plant is the world's sole producer of helium and the precautionary measures were taken to safeguard and assure its uninterrupted operation "so that production of the vital gas, and shipment to the Army and Navy for defense purposes, may continue on schedule," it was stated.

The towers are constructed of steel frame and glassed in on four sides. They will be manned by armed guards.

German 'Tourists'

By William Parker

Portugal And The Axis

THE INCREASING infiltration of German "tourists" into Portugal has evoked apprehension on the part of that little country, which together with Switzerland is the only European country not now occupied or dominated by the Soviets or Germany, or at war with Hitler.

At Cintra, Portugal, a few days ago, I saw two motor coaches unload 60 men "tourists," tall, blonde, blue-eyed foreigners. When they came back to their motor coaches after lunching at a Cintra hotel, townspeople asked their nationality. "We are Norwegians," several of the "tourists" volunteered.

A Polish woman refugee stepped forward. "You are Germans!" she charged. "I saw plenty of you in my own country."

The "tourists" were quickly herded into their cars by their conductor and drove away toward Lisbon.

The arrival of "tourists" in Portugal began some weeks ago and they have been coming in augmented numbers since officials of the Nazi Ministry of Propaganda came to Lisbon from Berlin, via plane from Barcelona, and were entertained at a banquet by the Portuguese Ministry of Propaganda. German journalists also attended the banquet.

When I was in Portugal a year ago, the German population here was small, comprising for the greater part, Germans long engaged in business in Lisbon. But one of the most changed aspects of Portugal since my last visit is the amount of German I now hear spoken in cafes, hotels and on the streets. The "tourists" are easily distinguishable from the 2,000 German-speaking central Europe refugees, for the refugees are mostly men and women of 50 years or so; the "tourist" German-speaking men are of military age and without women companions.

THE INTENTIONS of Hitler in this westernmost section of Europe have been significant but obscure since the debacle of France. It has been supposed that Hitler wants Spain as a base from which to attack Gibraltar and also from which to ferry German mechanized divisions into Africa, via French Morocco, as a factor in his spring campaign against the British.

When I came out of the occupied region of France, after the armistice, I saw hundreds of "railway guns" and other long-range artillery, tanks, machine guns and other mechanized equipment stretching for miles on sidetracks, between Biarritz, France, and Hendaye, on the French-Spanish frontier. All of this military equipment has now been taken away.

When I recently came out of unoccupied France, I saw hundreds of empty freight cars of the Italian and German railway lines along the French-Spanish frontier from Perpignan to Portbou. All of these cars had brought to Spain what a railway employe characterized as "supplies."

Military activity as I passed through Spain was of the same nature which I have seen in other countries where army mobilization has been under way. German appeared to have supplanted English as the second language.

Up to the present Portugal has been spared in the war of nerves in Europe and the country has rigorously avoided participation in war profits, either as a producer or a base for trans-shipment of war supplies. But now the Nazis have their own print shop in Lisbon, where they publish various booklets glorifying the Nazi system and Nazi military achievements. The British depend more for their propaganda on the London newspapers and illustrated magazines, which arrive in Lisbon by plane two days after publication in London.

WHILE PORTUGAL is particularly vulnerable to military attack by land and sea, the Portuguese do not, I was told in official circles, expect any direct attack by the Spaniards, for the two countries are on friendly terms and hundreds of Portuguese youths fought with Gen. Franco's forces in the late Spanish civil war. The five-hour talk between Gen. Franco and Mussolini at Bordighiera, Italy, January 11, this year, however, centered Portuguese speculation on the Axis objectives; and the absence of any official statement on that long talk has created mental unrest in Portugal. Portugal is not unmindful that Rumania and Bulgaria allowed their countries to be utilized as a jumping-off place by the German forces.

SINCE HITLER'S assurance of "respect of integrity" to Portugal, shortly after the start of the war, various similarly assured nations have witnessed the violation of such pledges when the Nazis got round to another thrust somewhere. And the visit of Japan's premier, Yosuke Matsuoka, to Berlin, Rome and Moscow, in furtherance of Axis world-wide policy has not heartened the Portuguese. The Portuguese colony of Macao, a practically undefended strip strategically situated at the mouth of the Pearl River, lies between the British island of Hong Kong and has access by river to Canton, China. The Portuguese island of Timor, undefended (at the western end of the Netherlands East Indies archipelago) is only 450 miles from the important city of Darwin, Australia.

The history of the Portuguese mainland shows that in its past centuries of war superior military strength, not strategy, has triumphed, the topography of continental Portugal not lending itself to natural military defense. Portugal's regular peacetime army numbers 54,814 and with a wartime strength, including trained reserves, 514,814. Spain's peacetime army is 400,000, war strength 4,000,000. Portugal has only a small navy, two cruisers, half a dozen torpedo boat destroyers and several submarines, all fairly modern; her air force is neglible.

PORTUGAL would be a greater economic and military prize than her small surface on the map of Europe indicates. Continental Portugal and her colonial empire, in comparison with the principal countries of Europe, cover 2,168,071 kilometers, as against Spain, France, England, Italy and Germany, on the continent, of 2,091,639 kilometers. Spread out on the map of Europe, Portugal and her colonies would blanket Spain, France, Germany, Switzerland, Poland, Hungary, Roumania and Yugoslavia.

It has often been said that Portugal could with greater productive effort, become the market basket of Europe. Seasonally, Portugal has spring vegetables six weeks after South Africa and three months ahead of Europe. But with a people somewhat more energetic than the Spanish and less energetic than other European peoples, Portugal devotes herself mainly to providing her own foodstuffs and producing three principal exports, port wine, cork and sardines. Eighty-three per cent of her population is peasant, hardly more than 30 per cent of the total population can read and an average prosperity appears to content the people more than the prospect of intensive labor.

THE UNITED STATES would have a vital, military interest in any change in the exterior political status of Portugal, for the Azores are Europe's westernmost group of islands. Semitropical, self-sustaining in good and fresh water, and with good port facilities and hidden inlets, the Azores could easily be converted into a "Gibraltar of the Atlantic" by an aggressive foreign power, with the distance from the mainland of Portugal only 900 miles.

But little over a year ago (April 8, 1940) Germany invaded Denmark and Norway, and the European war seemed relatively far away from the United States. The Nazi conquests of Yugoslavia and Greece and their pressure against the British forces in Libya has now put British defense back almost to where it was a year ago, and, if the Germans are successful in the Balkans, Portugal may now become a new focal point of interest, thus bringing the war that much closer to America's doorstep.

$304,000,000 in Waterway Projects Put Up to House

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee yesterday recommended $304,000,000 in waterway improvements as a post-war "back-log" of public works then unexpectedly reported the highly controversial $197,000,000 Florida Ship Canal bill.

Separated from the omnibus waterways improvements pool, the canal bill was reported over the opposition of Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield.

Mansfield, who twice previously had sponsored the ill-fated project, said he would file a minority report condemning the authorization at this time. He said the war has so diminished coast-wise shipping that the canal would have no practical commercial value.

The canal, once strongly recommended by President Roosevelt but repeatedly blocked in House and Senate, would cut 400 feet wide and 33 feet deep across the Florida Peninsula, shortening distance between Atlantic and Gulf ports some 400 miles. Work actually began in 1935, and continued until $5,400,000 allocated from emergency relief funds was exhausted in 1936.

The canal and such other controversial projects as the $66,000,000 Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway were expected to figure in log-rolling efforts should the Administration submit legislation implementing the St. Lawrence waterways agreement. A motion to approve the St. Lawrence agreement was presented at yesterday's committee meeting, but ruled out of order.

The Tombigee project to connect the Tennessee Valley with the Gulf of Mexico meanwhile was included by the committee in the $304,000,000 "reservoir of meritorious projects" recommended for future appropriation.

A policy amendment will be attached to the omnibus authorization, to prevent immediate outlays.

The State of Arizona

Tucson, Ariz., April 30.

OLD BRISBANE was a great hand at the sort of pieces which this one would like to be, but I am not much good at it, and probably will stammer and gag and may rip it out of the mechanical writer and throw it away. Old Doubledome, or Big George, as the cartoonists in the Hearst hyena room used to call him, would go tooling across country in a train of cars and talking to himself in his recording machine about the prairie dogs and cacti, erosion, irrigation, light-years and the remarkable investment possibilities of some locality in which he just happened to have a patch for sale. And in no time he would be finished with another installment of a column which had more readers than any other in the history of the package-goods editorial trade—except, perhaps, Odd McIntyre's.

PEGLER

Brisbane was a good reporter, because he just assumed that most of his customers or consumers hadn't seen the place which he was describing or didn't know the simple scientific or historical facts which he was relating. This was a good idea, because most of them hadn't or didn't, and the few readers who had or did could cut class and mark themselves A, because they knew the lesson already.

THIS IS ABOUT the astonishing State of Arizona, which is new territory to me and, from the look of the map, appears to be firmly in the grasp of Harold L. Ickes or otherwise retired from private ownership and the tax rolls to the extent of at least half of the total area. Three Hopi and Navajo Indian reservations in the northeastern part of the State alone appear to cover more ground than all of Connecticut. And there is an almost unbroken strip ranging in width from about 50 to 100 miles extending from the Utah line to Mexico all given over to national forests and parks and Lebensraum for those native tribes who were Hitlerized out of their ancient heritage by the rather recent forebears of our currently righteous race.

This section where I am, in the southeastern quarter, is mostly desert, but not of the sort with which Britain and France tried to bribe Benito (the Bum) Mussolini to quit blowing out his face and, for goodness' sake, behave. That was low-down desert and not worth a damn, whereas this desert grows cactus of a hundred kinds and tomatoes, hay, cotton or beans if you squirt a little water on it, and seems to be underlaid with copper and silver and some gold. The cactus isn't worth much except as scenery, but scenery is no negligible crop, especially since the war has quarantined most of us to our own country. And in addition to the scenery there is a climate which is good for tuberculars, who frankly and grimly call themselves lungers, for some arthritics and certain types of asthmatics. Along the beds of the streams, most of which vanish between rains, there are cottonwood groves, and on stretches of table land and foothill country there are herds of meat cattle.

THE COW BUSINESS seems rather puny, however, and the story is that the city dudes from the West and East and the big centers in between have crowded the kine off the range in an economic squeeze that was meant for no such thing. The native ranches began taking in a few vacation boarders, mostly in winter, and discovered that by providing a little rude luxury, such as showers and other plumbing in roughhewn, glamorized ranch-hotels, and selling cattle by the slab, medium-rare, in campfire settings, they could earn enough to retire from the cattle trade.

Meantime, quite a lot of city people, always pining to get away from it all, took down some of their money and bought, at high and careless prices, large areas of grazing land on which they went in for ranching in a half-serious way. Well as some of the regular ranchers prospered in the boarding-house trade, others found themselves competing with extravagant amateurs who didn't have to show a profit, and even with some who preferred to run up a loss for income tax purposes.

The result has been that the shore-enough rancher can't make it pay, and is waiting for the dudes to get sick of their fad and abandon their lands, wells and buildings at sacrifice prices to people who can raise cattle at a profit on a fair investment.

Furthermore, a lot of the cow hands have been hired off the regular range to act as guides, and some of them as gigolos for the vacation trade at higher wages plus tips—which also amount to something.

I guess I won't tear this up, after all. Maybe I will even run on some more, although it is nervous going, because some of the locals are sure to feel bitten on the hand if I don't say something real nice about hereabouts, with no discount whatever—which somehow ain't my way.

Weakness Of The Patrol System

IN HIS GREAT speech Sunday, Winston Churchill gave the President's new Atlantic patrol system as proof that "Westward the land is bright." It was the best evidence he had, unfortunately. But no one should be deceived into thinking the patrol system anything but a makeshift compromise, in defense of which competent naval authorities can offer only a feeble, conventional murmur of hope.

ALSOP

The theory of the patrol system is that American ships and planes will spot German planes and submarines for the British, warning convoys away and summoning the British navy and air force. This is merely an extension out into the Atlantic of the old neutrality patrol in hemisphere waters. Although few persons realized it at the time, the neutrality patrol also spotted German craft for the British, since its reports were purposely sent in simple Navy code. The President once grimly remarked that "if the British couldn't break the code, they were much stupider than he thought."

THE WEAKNESS of the compromise can be seen by comparing it with the real shipping protection system for which the patrols are a substitute. This system, worked out by a British-American joint committee which met quietly in Washington until a few weeks ago, calls on the British and American navies to clear a safe sea-lane for merchant shipping from Halifax to Greenland, to Iceland, to Northern Scotland, where the British navy alone is to take over the task of coastal convoying. The system is reported to be perfected to the final detail. American officers, led by the Admiral who is to have charge of it, are even understood to have visited Britain to make the necessary arrangements at that end. All is in readiness, except that the President has not given the word.

Furthermore, it is impossible to discover any really well-informed member of the Administration who does not regard the President's giving the word as a mere matter of time. In the last few days, according to the Navy's reports, German submarine and air activity in the Atlantic area has declined, and shipping losses have dropped proportionally. Before then, however, losses were downright appalling. Even now, the British are steadily using up their reserve stocks of all sorts, and their orders for steel and other war materials are piling up at the factories here while food receives shipping priority. It is estimated that their minimum import deficiency in the next month will be from 500,000 to 600,000 tons. In short, if the President intends to pursue his policy to its logical conclusion, he cannot delay giving the word much beyond two months more.

THESE FACTS only serve to underline the bitter irony of the American position. For if we could do immediately what everyone believes we shall do soon, we should have a good chance of restoring the Mediterranean situation, as well as meeting the Atlantic danger.

It was pointed out in this space yesterday that owing to Turkish and Russian sogginess, the Germans will probably have a clear road to the vital oil of Iran and Irak. The picture in the Eastern Mediterranean is as dark as it well can be. But if the British hold in Egypt, and the Western Mediterranean does not go also, the loss of Iran and Irak will only confront the British Mediterranean fleet with a grave supply problem. For even now the Germans only have sufficient transport to bring a comparatively small percentage of Rumanian oil into Western Europe. They can hardly get much use from Iranian and Iraki oil unless they are able to carry it past Eastern Europe to the Western port of Marseilles, where transport facilities are far better. This they cannot do until the Mediterranean is a German lake.

As to Egypt, the outlook is not bright, but far from hopeless. The supply lines of the German mechanized divisions in Libya are infinitely long and tenuous. In the last days, heavy reinforcements, both of men and material, have been landed at Alexandria. So far Wavell's armies have held the Germans and Italians back, despite their numerical superiority. But even assuming that the drive to Suez is halted, the outlook in French North Africa and the Iberian Peninsula is extremely black.

THE POSITION of Marshal Weygand in French North Africa has been seriously undermined. In Casa Blanca—a port on the Atlantic, it should be remembered—more than 200 German military men and Gestapo agents are in virtual control of the situation. Elsewhere in his provinces, Weygand must deal with internal troubles fomented by the Germans, while preparing to ward off dangers from without.

In Spain, renewed German pressure for an invitation to pass the Pyrenees has just been resisted by Gen. Franco, despite the best efforts of his pro-German brother-in-law, Ramon Serrano Suner. Spain is a foodless desert, populated by an angry, antiforeign people, now riddled with typhus, and destitute of all but rudimentary transport facilities. The Germans want, for these reasons, to come in by invitation, which would be far easier for them. But come they now plan to in the end, according to the best authorities here. If they come, both French North Africa and Portugal, with its magnificent Atlantic port of Lisbon, will fall into their hands. And the fortress of Gibraltar and the base in Egypt will then be isolated and ineffectual.

KINTNER

THE GERMAN hesitation on the Spanish border promises a few weeks' breathing spell. During that short space, in the opinion of many of the ablest American strategists, it is within this country's power to reverse the trend of events in the western Mediterranean by resorting to the shipping protection system now waiting to be put in force. That will commit the United States. It will have an overwhelming effect on morale in every nation, and particularly those nations and territories threatened with German aggression. Above all, it will derange the German timetable still further and make the German high command hesitate to take on far-flung new commitments. Under the circumstances, American policy offers a tragic parallel to the behavior of King Tarquin, who had to pay the Cumean Sibyl the same price for three of her celebrated books as he was originally asked for 12.

Highways of the Future: Elevated By-Pass Proposed for Georgetown Waterfront...

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

This is the first article in a series illustrating improvements in the District highway system, as suggested in the report of the Highway Planning Survey. A public hearing on the recommendations will be held by the Commissioners on May 20.

One of the more important items included in the recent Highway Planning Survey report is a proposed Georgetown by-pass route skirting narrow, congested M Street with an elevated structure along the waterfront.

Although no official announcement has been made, it is understood this project will be one of the first undertaken when and if the recommendations of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, are approved by the commissioners and Congress.

Designed to eliminate the traffic "bottleneck" on M Street in Georgetown from Twenty-ninth Street to Key Bridge, the by-pass would start with a depressed highway along K Street just west of Connecticut Avenue and connect with the overpass at the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

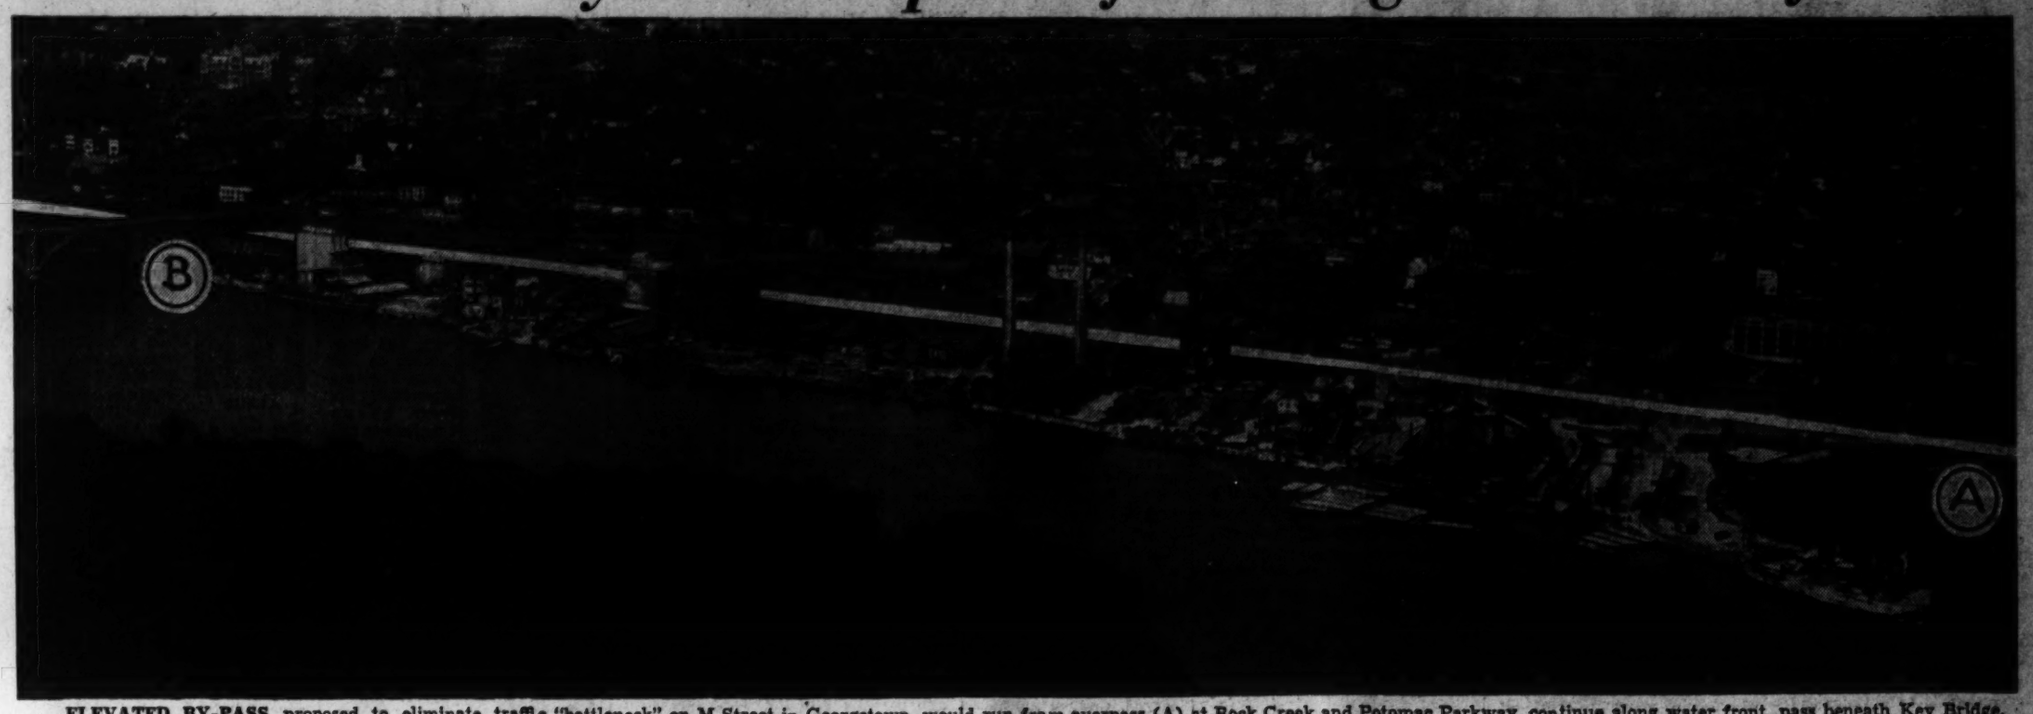
From the overpass, the roadway would become elevated along the K Street waterfront, running beneath Key Bridge, crossing the C. & O. Canal and connecting with Canal Road.

Canal Road, under the proposed plans of Whitehurst, would be widened or relocated to connect with Foxhall Road and Foxhall Road would be improved from Reservoir Road to Nebraska Avenue Northwest providing a high-speed roadway into Maryland.

The projected plans also call for K Street to run beneath Washington Circle, forming a tunnel similar to the one at Thomas Circle and the one under construction at Scott Circle.

For traffic using the by-pass route, ramps would be provided to Key Bride giving motorists free access either to Virginia or sections of Georgetown north of M Street.

Under proposals including in the survey report, the depressed section of K Street would run from Connecticut Avenue to twenty-fourth Street with north and south streets overpassing and service roadways connecting abutting property.



ELEVATED BY-PASS proposed to eliminate traffic "bottleneck" on M Street in Georgetown, would run from overpass (A) at Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, continue along water front, pass beneath Key Bridge, (B) and connect with Canal Road

It is planned that K Street west of Twenty-fourth Street to the Rock Creek grade separation follow the same pattern of channelization as now exists between Thirteenth Street and Connecticut Avenue.

Whitehurst, pending further studies of the project, has declined to estimate cost of the by-pass route, although it is included in the $10,160,000 general improvement estimates.

Both Whitehurst and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer are hopeful the Georgetown plan will be given priority when funds for the entire $44,000,000 highway improvement program are made available.

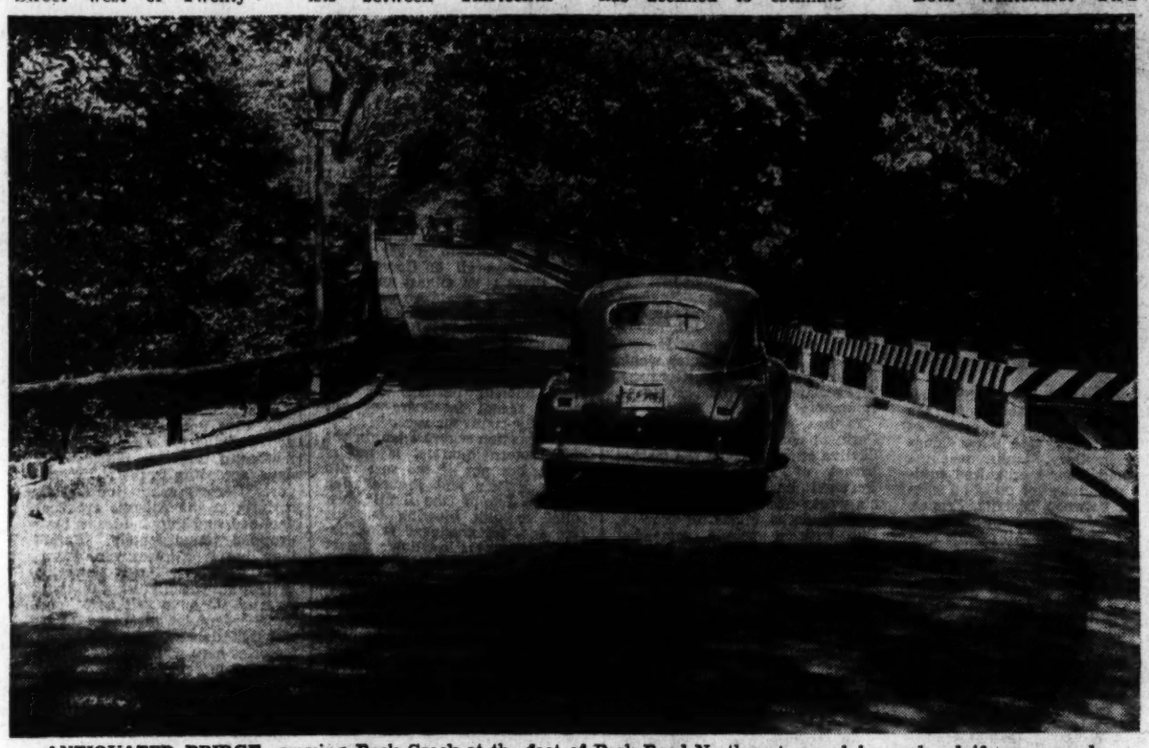
Another major job contemplated in the survey report is replacement of the antiquated Twentieth Street Bridge crossing Rock Creek at the foot of Park Road Northwest. The span is more than 40 years old and is considered by city planners as not only an eyesore, but a traffic menace.

It is estimated by Whitehurst that of the 30,000 vehicles which daily cross Rock Creek Park, a large share use the Twentieth Street Bridge from the Tilden Street and Park Road park entrances.

The present structure provides only thin, iron guard rails for protection of traffic. Approaches to both sides curve dangerously and must be marked with black and white warning stripes on high, board fences.

"Both the bridge and approaching roadways are inadequate for the volume of traffic using this route across the park," the Whitehurst report states.

At an estimated cost of $400,000, it is proposed to replace the old span with a new, modern bridge aligned with the park roads on either end.



ANTIQUATED BRIDGE, crossing Rock Creek at the foot of Park Road Northwest, would be replaced if recommendations in Whitehurst survey are approved. Approaches to both sides of the more-than-40-year-old span curve dangerously into the bridge

Woman Whose Husband Interferes With Baby Care Supplies More Data, to Refute Suspicion That She Is 'Bossy' Type; Depicts Him as Chronic Meddler

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Thank you for your reply of April 28 to my problem of how to cope with my husband's interference with our baby's care and training. I am afraid, however, that I did not give you a clear picture of the situation. I did not want to be too severe in criticizing my husband—and ended by giving the impression that I am the "bossy" type, who will take no suggestions from anyone.

In your comment you spoke of my "upbraiding the baby's father for interfering with his schedule." But if you knew my husband, you would realize that he is the sort of man who could not be "upbraided" by anyone—least of all, by his wife. And I have never upbraided anyone in my life. In fact, I am a "softie," and cannot talk at all when upset. I have been trying for years to get along peacably with him, in spite of the strain of having every plan and idea "bucked." But in the matter of the baby's care, I feel that I cannot in conscience indulge all his vagaries.

What am I to do when my housekeeper—who is a good girl, absolutely trustworthy, interested in the baby's welfare and eager to do her best—comes to me and protests that she does not know what to do, because my husband countermands all the directions she receives from me? If I plan a menu for the baby, my husband changes it. If I choose certain garments for the baby to wear, he orders the housekeeper to dress him in something else.

Baby was trained to drinking milk from cup, when his father gave him back the bottle. Now he wants to go back to giving him a bottle at 6 o'clock in the morning, although he hasn't had it for months. This is because baby sometimes (but not always) cries for his breakfast while it is being prepared for him after his morning bath—a delay of about three minutes. Yet if he crows with joy of living, as though delighting in the noise he makes, his father angrily shouts at him to stop and threatens to punish him. You see, it isn't "fatherly interest" that motivates his interference—but a chronic defiance of any plans of mine.

In my earlier letter, I failed to mention that, in addition to interfering in the nursery, he supervises all other household matters, too. He places the furniture, rugs, pictures, everything, just as he wants them—particularly if he thinks I want them certain other ways for reasons of color harmony and balance. So again, I ask you—what do you think of such a situation? And what do you advise me to do about it?

STILL DISTRESSED.

Full-Time Job for Man Would Ease Friction

DEAR S. D.: This additional data certainly does present your husband in a vastly less favorable light. I recall your saying in your preceding letter that his working hours permit him to be home every afternoon and one whole day a week, whereas you hold a job which keeps you away from home all day, six days a week. I think your difficulties as described stem largely from this unseemly arrangement—since it is a fact well-known to most housewives who have ever tolerated an idle husband around the house in daytime, that the average family man in that impasse just can't keep his nose out of trouble.

While truly deplorable, it is well-nigh inevitable that your husband would "take over," experimentally, in the domestic arena in your absence—for sheer lack of something better to do. Very likely he is a man of considerable latent executive ability and ambition, as witness his decidedly autocratic temperament; a man who is "spoiling," as the saying goes, for a chance to run some organization or outfit according to his ideas of how the job should be done. With his talents, energies and ambitions balked of expression in the business world; stymied, as he is, in a part-time job; economically tethered to his own backyard a part of every day—it is conceivable that he can no more resist the temptation to boss the housekeeper around than water could refrain from running down hill.

So much for what I think about the situation. As to what to do about it—a sterner sort of woman than yourself would rise up in righteous indignation at such bootless interference in her proper domain, and would either send the offending gentleman scuttling to the nearest Engine House for shelter and companionship in his leisure; or else assign him, daily, a list of handyman chores to do that would keep him out of mischief while her back was turned. But in view of your "softie" disposition and inability to speak up in a crisis, it seems that a full-time job for your husband is the one potential corrective of the discord that prevails. M. H.

Girl's Parents Resent Her Beau's 'Poor Manners'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently I had the honor of having a midshipman spend the week-end at my home. My parents supplied us with all amusements in the evening—paying for everything. On his return to the Academy, four weeks ago, he neglected to write a "thank-you" note to either my parents or me. When a midshipman "drags" a girl for a week-ends, he expects a "thank-you note from her before he writes again.

Today I received an invitation from this boy for a week-end at Annapolis. My parents refuse to let me accept until he thanks them for their hospitality. How can I tell him that I can't accept his invitation because of his poor manners? Please answer this week. BETTY.

Oldsters' Attitude Less Than Gracious

DEAR BETTY: It has been said that whoever charges another with lack of good manners is demonstrating similar want in himself. If it so happens that your midshipman has not been schooled in the gentle art of writing "thank-you" notes for favors received, that gap in his education should (from the stuffed shirt viewpoint) be considered more his misfortune than his fault. No doubt he thanked both you and your parents profusely for your hospitality at the time of taking his departure—and assumed you understood that he sincerely meant what he said. So why carp over his failure to follow through with a formal echo, as it were?

If your parents are adamantly opposed to your accepting his invitation, make gracious excuses. Don't hurl a charge of bad manners at him as your reason for declining—or you will be committing the same social sin for which you damn him. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

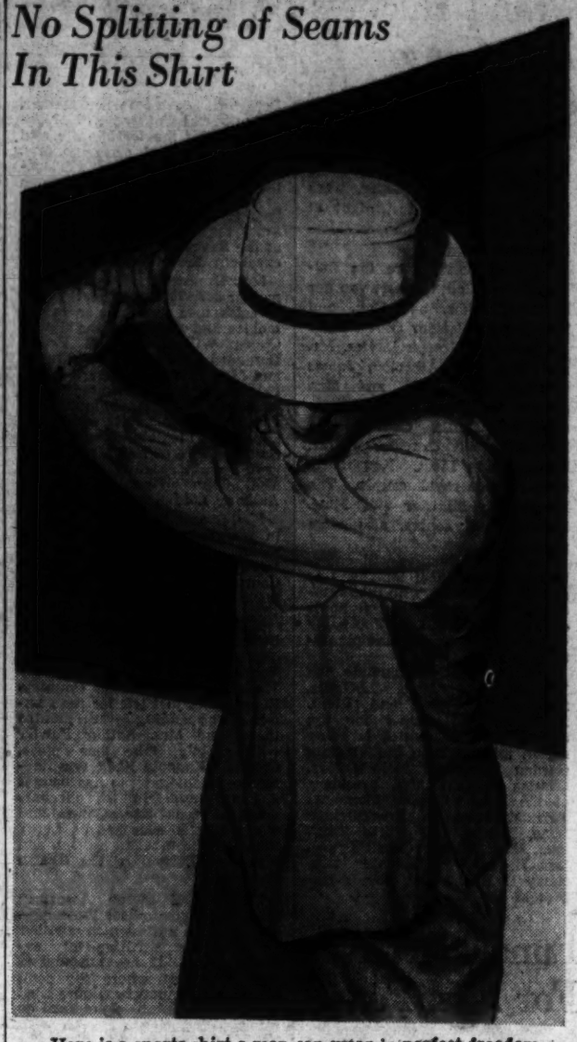
No Splitting of Seams In This Shirt



Here is a sports shirt a man can wear in perfect freedom—without splitting a seam every time he swings a golf club. This shirt, equally fine for bowling, horseback riding, hunting, rowing, tennis and other games of action, was designed by a golfer. The idea was conceived of eliminating the binding feeling of the sleeve as it catches on the upper arm when completing the swing. At the point where the sleeve meets the body of the shirt there is an insert of French ribbing that stretches and twists with the body movements. This shirt comes in either gabardine or washable rayon in natural, brown, blue, gold, green and white.

Story of Girl Who Reduced Too Rapidly

By Ida Jean Kain

YOUNGSTERS sometimes have too much enthusiasm—even for reducing. You teenage girls who don't think once before cutting your three square meals a day down to a sip of water and crumb cake could take a lesson in moderation from a girl who tried fast reducing and didn't like the outcome.

Here's the story:

"I lost 25 pounds in one month—but it took three years for my skin to snap back into place! After that long a time, my friends suddenly began saying how slim I looked. According to the scales, I hadn't lost another ounce."

Our heroine, who doesn't mind being held up as a bad example, is Helen O'Connell, band vocalist with Jimmy Dorsey. There's nothing wrong with her looks now. She's pretty enough to be Queen of the May. And her figure is perfect: Height, 5 feet 6 inches; weight, 122 pounds; bust, 35 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 36 inches.

How It All Started

But let's go back again. You'll be interested in know how she happened to put on too much weight, what made her decide to reduce, how she did it, and how she went about streamling after she had lost weight.

Helen had always danced for hours every day. At the age of 13, she was giving lessons in dancing. But then she started to sing for her bread, butter and jam, and practically gave up dancing altogether—that was when the scales started to creep up on her. Soon her friends were calling her "Butterball."

But she was working so hard and making such rapid progress with her singing that one of the leading bandmasters offered to give an audition. When she finished singing, he said, yes, her voice was very nice, and he would let her know. A few weeks later she had a letter from his asking tentatively whether she had lost any weight. That was enough for Helen—she could take a hint. But if she were doing it over, she wouldn't take it quite so hard.

Liquid Diet Did It

She went on one of those three-day liquid diets and: "After that, I didn't seem to be hungry, and my weight went right on dropping, too fast. At the end of the month I wasn't feeling any too good. It's lucky a bunch of strepticocci wasn't floating around, or I'd have caught something."

As quickly as she could manage it, Helen went back to eating normally and to taking exercise. She is convinced now that any girl can reduce simply by cutting down on the sweets and starches at mealtime, and by leaving off the between-meal snacks. She never has any trouble with her weight nowadays, and it's my guess that most of you overweight girls could solve your problem of excess poundage by the same simple measures. You can lose weight safely by refusing the calories you don't need and specific exercise will give you a lovely figure.

Ripe Olive Meat Sauce

Here's a delightful meat sauce—the sauce you've probably been looking for to serve with inexpensive meat loaves, and a new just-hits-the-spot addition to macaroni, spaghetti and service of other plain pastes. Its rich flavor is based on the mingling of chopped or sliced ripe olives, onions and tomato catsup, with added spicing.

To prepare approximately three cups of this unusually savory "ripe olive meat sauce," melt 2 tablespoons butter in a skillet and add ¼ teaspoon allspice and blend. Add ¾ cup water, and ½ cup tomato catsup gradually, stirring as it cooks over low heat, to prevent lumping. Boil for 2 or 3 minutes until flour is cooked. Add ½ cup chopped or sliced ripe olives and blend thoroughly. Allow to heat through and serve over meat loaf, croquettes or the various pastes.

Ripe olives have an affinity of flavor for meats which is at its best in meat sauces. In fact, you need add nothing more to meat drippings of steaks, from ground hamburger to fillet, than the contents of one small container of the ready-to-use chopped or sliced fruit to make a most delicious sauce.

China's New Foreign Minister Is Feted At Capital's First Garden Party of Season

By Carolyn Bell

A small, dapper man in a gray suit, Dr. Quo Tai-chi, who will leave for China shortly to take up his duties as minister of foreign affairs, was guest of honor at Washington's first garden party of the season yesterday afternoon. The rolling lawns of Twin Oaks, the Chinese Embassy, was studded with Senators in huddles with Ambassadors . . . pencil-slim Chinese girls in bright native frocks, slit to the knee . . . and guests taking colored movies of the scene.

Dr. Hu Shih, brilliant Chinese Minister, has a faculty for gathering in an unusual group of guests—and yesterday was no exception. A tall gentleman, with a shock of gray hair, and sporting a pink shirt, wandered about the grounds. He was James Montgomery Flagg, noted artist, who was hoping the Ambassador would step out onto the lawn so he could get a quick sketch of him. Mr. Flagg had a portfolio under his arm, for he had just finished picturing Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army. Guests gathered around the artist to admire his sketches of such notables as Lord Halifax, British Ambassador; Secretary of State Cordell Hull and the Australian Minister, Richard G. Casey.

Holding court of his own was Frank N. G. Buchman, head of the Oxford Group who, according to his friends, has been in hiding at the Hay-Adams House for the past few weeks.

Mrs. Cordell Hull was squiring Mrs. Lawrence Tibbet about, introducing her to first one group and then another—and Mrs. Tibbet admitted that she was having "name difficulty." When complimented on her clever hat—composed entirely of currants and leaves—she said she had made it herself. With her concert-singer husband, Mrs. Tibbet will leave in June for a tour of South America. A tobacco-brown frock completed her outfit. Mrs. Hull wore a smart black pleated frock and her hat was trimmed with pink roses.

Lord Halifax Attends Party

Diplomats by the dozens turned up at the 5-to-7 fete, which lasted well after that. Lord Halifax was an early arrival, as was the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins, Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera and the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels.

Entering the newly-painted embassy—and yesterday it was covered with blooming wistaria—guests wandered from the drawing room into the dining room, where tea and cakes were being served. Centering the table was a huge bouquet of snapdragons in yellow, orange and pink. Mme. Hsiao was serving tea at one end. Meanwhile her husband Maj. Hsiao, Third Secretary of the Embassy, was out on the lawn taking movies. At the other end of the table serving tea was pretty Mme. Kwong, who wore a heavily embroidered Mandarin coat.

At the far end of the lawn a bar had been set up where guests were served champagne, orange juice and whisky. At the other end of the tree-studded ground, ringed in blossoming dogwood, a table of iced coffee, cakes and sandwiches was arranged. The ladies of the embassy wore gayer frocks than usual yesterday. Mme. Yu, wife of the second secretary, was lovely in a brilliant turquoise outfit. Wandering about with first one group and then another was, Victor Kwong, attache of the embassy.

McNutts Glimpsed In the Throng

Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, was an early arrival at the party, as was Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Attorney General. Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, smart in beige, chatted with a group on the lawn. Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft were in deep conversation with the French Ambassador, Henri Haye. Others there were Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Senator Theodore Green, Justice Frank Murphy, in a debonair gray-blue suit; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling, the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, just back from Florida, and Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom.

Surrounded by a cluster of friends were Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Mrs. McNutt wore a tricky hat of pale pink satin and flowers. Mr. McNutt sported a deep Florida tan and had a fresh white carnation in his lapel. The Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan were there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Ernest G. Draper and Gen. H. K. Rutherford. Mme. De Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Minister, chatted with British Minister Nevile Butler. Mme. De Kauffmann was smartly turned out in a black sheer tucked frock and Dutch cap. The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom also were there.

"Were just back from White Sulphur Springs," said Mrs. George Renchard, who was accompanying her husband. She is the former Miss Stellita Stapleton and a bride of scarcely a week. Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long were there, as were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mme. Procope, wife of the Finnish Minister; Don Adolfo Scilingo, Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Miss Patricia Grady, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas.

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi were there, as were Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dimock, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan, Mme. Chang, in a smart print native Chinese frock; the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Gen. and Mrs. Sherman Miles and hundreds of others.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

"ALL SAFE," Mrs. Christopher Bramwell radioed to her mother, Mrs. Charles Courtney, of Washington, after the terrible air raid on London a week or so ago. Mrs. Bramwell, the former Lilie O'Donnell, and her husband, who was with the British Embassy here, left for London last January. Since then they have been living at the Savoy Hotel because of its excellent air raid shelter.

Mrs. Bramwell has written her mother describing the aggregation of celebrities who cluster in the lobbies and shelter of the Savoy. Queen Wilhelmina and Prince Bernhard have been staying there, and Mrs. Bramwell describes the Prince as "most charming." She wrote her mother that dinners and teas, incredible as it seems, still go on in London. Mrs. "Mike" Scanlon, wife of our Air Attache, gave a party recently in honor of Mrs. John Winant and Mrs. Anthony Biddle.

Mrs. Bramwell left her children in Washington with their grandmother. She had hoped to return this summer to see them, but Mrs. Courtney doubts now that she'll make the difficult journey.

THE BRAMWELL HOME on N Street in Georgetown is being occupied by a succession of New Yorkers who decided to try Washington this season. Countess Zoppola has just left for the summer after spending several months there, and Mrs. Arthur Fowler will shortly take her place. Countess Zoppola liked Washington so much that she has bought a house here. In the checkerboard of recent moves, the house which Mrs. Fowler had on Leroy Place has been taken by Col. and Mrs. Rex Benson of the British Embassy.

THE WIFE of an American Foreign Service officer these days can count on a life which is either tremendously thrilling or extremely dull. If her husband is sent to a post where she can't follow, the temporary widow must twiddle her thumbs alone until he returns. But if she can go with him, her adventures should make Grade A listening for years to come.

Mrs. H. Earle Russell belongs in the latter category. She has just returned from Johannesburg, and will leave shortly for Casablanca, Morocco, where her husband will be Consul General. The couple are now in Washington visiting P. K. Norris at his home in Chevy Chase.

They will sail May 10 on an American Export liner for Lisbon and from there will go by boat and train to Morocco. Because there are so many refugees in Morocco, the Russells were unable to get a furnished house. So they are bravely taking their furniture with them, trusting to luck it won't be sunk on the way over. Mrs. Russell is also packing a two-year supply of silk stockings and every bit of clothing she owns.

WHEN W. STARLING BURGESS, the well known yacht designer, told us that his assistant, Marjorie Young, was the only woman naval architect in the world, we dropped in at her office for a chat. Though it was 9 o'clock in the evening, Miss Young was bending over a drawingboard on which were plans for a United States Navy minesweeper. The designs are done on tracing cloth—wax-coated linen of the very best quality. If the wax were rubbed off, you would have the finest possible pocket handkerchief material.

Miss Young does not design ships for the Navy, but does difficult mathematical calculations and plots lines for Mr. Burgess. One person alone would be incapable of designing a big Naval vessel; if a man did by himself the drawing for a destroyer, for example, it would take him 250 years. Mr. Burgess has worked for years exclusively on designs of hulls.

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, after graduation from Wheaton College, Miss Young took up sailing in Newport, where her father is a doctor. She loved it so that she sailed up until January every winter and then built boat models until spring. She was reluctantly going to secretarial school when Mr. Burgess, a friend of her father's, invited her to be his secretary. He taught her calculus, trigonometry and other necessary subjects, and after she designed her first sailboat successfully, Miss Young qualified as a naval architect. In many European countries one must work a year in a shipyard to practice this profession, but in the United States, you just hang out your shingle.

Dr. Code Fetes Dr. Von Alexich At Reception

The Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code entertained yesterday afternoon at a reception at his home in Georgetown in honor of Dr. George M. von Alexich, of Middleburg, Va. Dr. Von Alexich is the former Austrian Envoy to The Hague and Brussels.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Willibald Ploechl and Countess Cassini.

Among the guests were Prince d'Aragon Pignatelli, the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Viscountess de Bourgoing, the Agricultural Attache of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Peters, the Air Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de la Sierra, Dr. Ploechl, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, Baron and Baroness Franz von Seidler, Mr. and Mrs. George Benemann, the Rev. Harold Gonder, who is vice rector of the American College at Louvain; the former Premier of France, M. Camille Chautemps and Mme. Chautemps, Mrs. Walter D. Denegre, Mr. and Mrs. Igor Cassini, Lyle Kennedy, Mrs. Gorge Bean and many more.

Mrs. Curtin Entertains For Miss Hilda Ruppert

Mrs. William A. Curtin, jr., entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham in honor of Miss Hilda Ruppert.

Miss Ruppert, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ruppert, will be married on May 17 to John Donahoe.

Miss Williams, Berryville Rector Are Wed

In Grace Episcopal Church at Berryville, Va., of which the bridegroom is rector, Miss Anne Cabell Williams, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Chew Williams, of Berryville, and the late Mr. Williams, of Baltimore, was married yesterday afternoon to the Rev. Ernest Herbert Williams, son of Mrs. S. M. Williams, of Boise, Idaho. The Rev. S. C. W. Fleming, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Gray Temple, of Fairfax, Va., officiated at the 4:30 ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Dr. William Cabell Moore, of Washington. Her gown of white satin was made with a full skirt ending in a train, and a round lace collar. Her tulle veil fell from a coronet of duchess lace and she carried bride's roses and gypsophilia.

Benefit to Aid Yugoslavs

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch announce that the Washington Committee of American Friends of Yugoslavia will present a benefit program in the legation, 1520 Sixteenth Street, on Friday evening, May 9, at 9:30 o'clock.

Mme. Fotitch has a large collection of costumes of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes from all parts of her native land and a feature of this program will be the "modeling" of these by a group of Washington's most vivacious debutantes.

Another feature will be the appearance of Tashamira, Yugoslav dancer, who is famous for her folklore interpretations in a number of the national dances.

The program, titled "Evening in Yugoslavia," also will include the showing of colored photographs of that country, made by Miss Peggy Lane, daughter of the American Minister to Yugoslavia. She showed these pictures with marked success at the World's Fair and gave a "personally conducted tour" with them at the Women's National Press Club luncheon Tuesday of this week when the Minister and Madame Fotitch were honor guests of the club.

The American Friends of Yugoslavia, newly organized in Washington, is a branch of the group in New York City, which was launched a short time ago with Frank Polk as chairman and with a committee that includes Hamilton Fish Armstrong, William M. Chadbourne, Col. William J. Donovan, Miss Malvina Hoffman, Thomas J. Watson and Wendell L. Willkie.

Funds raised by the Washington benefit will go to help Yugoslav refugees and foster educational projects for children of that country. Only 200 can be seated at the legation for this event and many of the tickets already have been taken. Reservations, however, can be made with Miss Alice Dodge, secretary of the legation, at Hobart 4692.

P.-T. A. Begins 17th Health Roundup Today

For the seventeenth consecutive year, the District Congress of Parents and Teachers today will begin its Summer Roundup. In this city-wide health program, directed toward preschool children, more than 1,000 boys and girls—youngsters who will enter school for the first time in September—will be given thorough physical examinations. These include also eye testing and tooth inspection.

If defects are discovered, parents are so advised, and recommendation made that they be corrected if possible during the summer months. The purpose of the roundup is to insure an entering class of school children in September as free from remedial defects as it is possible for them to be.

Last year, 1,024 children were examined, either at the school clinics or by family physicians, dentists and eye doctors, and of this number 35.5 per cent were referred to their physicians, and 39.5 per cent to the dentist. At the final checkup of the roundup it was found that 67.3 per cent had consulted their physicians and 57.7 per cent their dentists. In addition to the number of children examined, there were 77 medical doctors, 27 dentist and six dental hygienists engaged in the project, all of them assisted by hundreds of parent-teacher members.

The first school to hold its roundup this year is the Kingsman-Pierce, which conducted its examination yesterday. Today, the following schools will participate: Blake-Gales-Seaton, Brookland-Noyes, Barnard, Hilton-Peabody, Janney, Stanton, Woodridge and Wheatley. Altogether, there are participating, 45 parent-teacher associations embracing 66 schools and it is expected that when the final results are known, the number of children presented for examinations will greatly outnumber those examined last year.

Mrs. R. M. Graham is State chairman of the summer Roundup for the Parent-Teacher Congress.

On the advisory board of the Summer Roundup committee with her are: Dr. J. I. Murphy, chief school medical officer of the Health Department; Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, in charge of maternal and child care; Dr. Harry Ostrow, chief of the dental inspection service, Health Department; Mrs. Josephine Prescott, chief of the school nursing service; R. L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools; Dr. Birch Bayh, physical education director, public schools; Dr. J. H. McLeod, D. C. Medical Society; Dr. Harry Hoffman, D. C. Hull Rejects Japanese 'Peace' Terms

By International News Service

Secretary of State Hull yesterday rejected by implication Japanese "feelers" for joint United States-Japanese mediation of the European conflict and firmly reiterated his stand that there can be no peace between the democracies and the Axis powers so long as the totalitarian states pursue national policies of military conquest.

The "peace" terms, as set forth by the organ of the Tokyo foreign office, Japan Times-Advertiser, would give Germany and Italy complete power over Europe and Africa, and deliver the Far East to Japan.

The proposed terms were regarded by Washington authorities as being tantamount to unconditional surrender to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis. Officials termed them "preposterous."

When Secretary Hull's attention was directed to the published proposals at his press conference he would not even deign to give them the dignity of official status, but took the occasion to reaffirm in clear terms this Nation's attitude toward the aggressor nations.

This Government, the Secretary emphatically asserted, is pursuing, unchanged, its policy of thoroughly keeping alive the principles underlying all the basic relationships between civilized nations.

There was a time, he pointedly noted, when all nations observed these principles of international law. That was all he felt he need say, Hull added.

Hull's aides afterward called attention to the Secretary's recent speech in which he charged the Axis powers were attempting "world conquest" and must be resisted "wherever resistance will be most effective" as a further illumination of Hull's stand.

A chuckle of laughter spread through the crowd of shoppers that gathered at Fifteenth and F Streets Northwest yesterday when firemen responded to an alarm.

The fire wasn't much—in a trash can. But a fire is a fire, and one of the fire laddies arrived on the scene without a shirt, and his face covered with lather.

Cuts Recommended For Interior Agencies

House Appropriations Committee has recommended cuts in a score of budget estimates of Interior Department agencies. It knocked out $125,000 and with it 35 jobs in the department's soil and moisture operations, with the comment that "under existing conditions, when technical personnel is needed in defense agencies, it is not regarded as advisable at this time to encourage expansion of such top-heavy staffs in non-defense agencies." The comittee complimented Director Howard Gray of the Bituminous Coal Division and his staff for "working harmoniously" and for the "marked improvement in efficiency," and then slashed the division budget by $221,000. The reduction represents about 150 jobs.

Being transportation commissioner of the National Defense Commission covers much more territory than the commissioner himself—Ralph Budd—had believed. At 3:45 the other morning Budd was routed out of bed by a telephone. On the other end was a truck driver who had been arrested in Pennsylvania for carrying too heavy a load. The driver, it seems, said he was transporting defense materials to New York and he believed a word by Budd to the Pennsylvania cop would fix things up . . . and they accuse the Government of doing needless work in the name of national defense.

Census will raise the base salaries of its more than 4,000 punch card operators to $1,440 on May 16. It will continue the bonus system which will permit the more efficient operators to earn up to $1,620. Civil Service Commission permitted the bureau to raise punchers' salaries from $1,260 to $1,440 to meet a similar wage scale paid at War Department. However, approximately 175 punchers with unsatisfactory efficiency and production ratings will be laid off within two weeks. The bureau also has relaxed its leave regulations. It now will permit temporary employes to take a full week of accumulated leave in any one month without affecting promotions or pay raises.

FHA is working on a plan to attract college graduates who know something about appraising methods, real estate operations and architecture. Among other things the housing agency is trying to interest universities in giving courses that would fit pupils for FHA jobs. Indiana and Michigan universities already are offering such courses.

James LeCron, who managed the successful campaign of Vice President Henry Wallace, will be appointed to a key position in Surplus Marketing Administration in charge of distribution for the food and cotton stamp plans and of surplus foods for domestic use. He was special assistant to Wallace, when the latter was Secretary of Agriculture. LeCron is a former Des Moines newspaperman.

Civil Service Commission has raised the maximum age limit to the retirement age of 65 for open exams in trades and artisan positions such as machinist, toolmaker, sheet-metal worker, and instrument maker. There already is a shortage in most of these trades and the Government plans to hire thousands more . . . An exam for positions as training specialist, paying from $3,200 to $5,600, has been announced by the commission. Separate employment lists will be set up according to the types of training work for which eligibles are qualified . . . Agriculture Secretary Wickard has appointed J. E. Wells of Farm Credit as his special assistant to coordinate grain storage activities of the department.

Budget estimates for the Geological Survey were slashed $1,030,500 by the House Appropriations Committee, the sum included salaries for several hundred jobs. The office is mapping strategic areas which would be of military value but the committee refused an appropriation of $987,500 to continue the work. The committee report said that if funds were essential for the project they should be appropriated in a War Department bill.

The Bureau of Mines was the sole Interior agency to get more money than the Budget Bureau recommended. The committee recommended $57,800 more than budget estimates . . . Interior has about 20,000 employes outside Civil Service. It was recommended that 11,000 be brought under merit by the Ramspeck Bill . . . Interior is losing about 100 employes a month to defense agencies.

Supplemental D. C. Request In Committee

Officials Scheduled To Explain Items Today Before House Appropriations Unit

District officials are scheduled to appear before a House Appropriations subcommittee this afternoon to explain items in a $484,600 supplemental appropriation request for this fiscal year forwarded to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt.

As in previous supplemental requests made in behalf of the District, the President's budget director, Harold D. Smith, called the attention of Congress to the swift growth of certain sections of the city where defense workers are finding homes.

The principal items were for schools, sewer extensions and Gallinger Hospital. The budget director's report asked $190,000 for construction of an eight-room elementary school on a site to be acquired in the vicinity of Pennsylvania and Alabama Avenues Southeast.

For extension of sewers, $100,000 was asked chiefly because of recent curtailment of WPA labor.

The report asked $52,600 to care for an unexpectedly heavy patient load at Gallinger Hospital. It was explained that the daily average load for the first nine months of this fiscal year was 1,035 in comparison with 892 for the same period in the 1940 fiscal year, or an increase of 16.5 per cent.

An additional $90,000 is needed for extension of the water distribution system, the report said, to service new residential areas and also to meet new labor costs chargeable to "almost complete withdrawal of WPA labor."

Other items were:

Refuse department—$15,000.

To meet police and firemen's relief fund deficit—$30,000.

To meet increase in patient load at Glenn Dale tuberculosis sanatorium—$4,000.

To meet additional expense of keeping auto lien records and motor vehicle certificates of title in the office of Recorder of Deeds—$3,000.

In recommending transmittal of the items to Congress, Smith told the President that 1941 District revenues "appear to be sufficient" to cover the expenditures proposed.

$40,000 Worth Of 'Elegant Comfort' Out

Although it was believed by A. E. Demaray, associate director of the National Park Service, to be "one of the most essential improvements needed in the city," the House Appropriations Committee, it was revealed yesterday, turned down a request for an "elegant $40,000 marble-lined comfort station" at the Potomac Watergate.

In the foregoing, the reference to elegance is from the observations of Representative James G. Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, a member of the committee which reported the $177,000,000 Interior Department appropriation bill to the House.

The Watergate, it will be remembered, is where thousands of Washingtonians congregate on summer evenings for concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra.

Committee hearings, made public yesterday, also disclose the view of Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, on the proposed edifice. He said he felt "some of the high moguls of the music world" were "bringing a lot of pressure on the Park Service."

"I think," said Johnson, "that the majority of the members of this committee feel that there are many, many things that are far more essential and more pressing at this time than this so-called comfort station."

Demaray explained that the structure also was to have furnished a Park Police lodge house and a first-aid rescue station. He explained that the the station was to have been "a very simple and very modest structure." Johnson retorted:

"Well, if I have my way about it, it will be extremely simple; so simple that I do not care to discuss it anymore."

The $40,000 item was all that the committee deleted from estimates for National Capital Parks. Approved was a $21,750 item for addition of one sergeant and 10 privates to the Park Police force.

Festival Folk Give a Preview of Their Performances

AWAIT TODAY'S CURTAIN CALL—At a preview rehearsal last night, National Folk Festival performers enacted the parts they will play in festival opening today at 2 p. m. in Constitution Hall. At left, youths from the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala., render an Old English country dance. Right—Maria Bustos, a lyric soprano, is here with a group of Mexican dancers from Pasadena. Their dances and songs are real Mexican, not Spanish, she avows

Festival Performers Stage Preview at Dress Rehearsal

Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma marveled at the angular percussion beats of Haitian drums, and French choristers from Illinois found their language in the island patois uncommonly entertaining at the preview rehearsal last night, when festival performers romped through their parts in Constitution Hall.

The dress rehearsal, supervised by Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the National Folk Festival, was staged largely for timing the large number of folk groups and to permit sound engineers to adjust their equipment before the first of the six performances at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The stage has been converted into a miniature evergreen forest before which the dancers, minstrels, ballad singers and instrumentalists will perform twice today, tomorrow and Saturday. More than 500 persons will appear on the stage during the Festival. They came from 25 States by train, automobile and trailer caravan.

Jersey "Pine-Hawks"

The prize-winning square dancers from Stamford, Tex., moved with agility through old quadrille, circle dances and heel and toe polkas to which the cowboys have added a flock of figures of their own, and 24 handsome and husky youngsters from the Tennessee mountains stepped through play-games before going on to a party at Lafayette Junior High School, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Colby. They wore long, brightly colored gingham dresses which take graceful, draping lines in the movements of play-party and dance. Fred W. Colby, of Nashville, is leader of the group.

Dorothea Lawrence, known both as a concert soprano and a folklorist, brought a group of "pine-hawks" from the New Jersey pine barrens. These horn-pipe players and folk singers will have their first appearance in Washington today, and they insist that some of their songs date to the days when the pirates used Barnegat Bay as a rendezvous. In fact many of these pine-barren dwellers assert they are the descendants of these pirates.

New Group Appears

A group, which has not appeared at previous national festivals, was given places yesterday on the two Saturday programs. It is known as the Swiss Alpine Club of Helvetia, Randolph County, W. Va., and includes 18 persons.

The appearance of this group in Washington is due to the efforts of Congressman Jennings Randolph and M. L. Benedum, of Pittsburgh, the sponsor. The grandfathers of these Swiss Americans settled in the hills of Randolph County many years ago and Helvetia, in many ways, has preserved the native folkways of its settlers.

Members of the group belong to the 4-H Clubs and will present a program of Swiss folk songs, including yodeling, bell-ringing and dances. The visitors will be guests at tea of Charles Bruggmann, the Swiss Minister, at the legation tomorrow afternoon.

Permit for Parade Asked

From Fayetteville, N. C., a very large group will reach Washington today to present at the festival traditional Scotch songs and dances. Senator Robert Reynolds appealed to the police authorities yesterday for permission for the group to parade from the Union Station to the Capitol. The minstrels will be accompanied by a band, all wearing kilts, and the woodwind sections will play for the dancers on the stage.

One of the most charming folk music groups to reach Washington yesterday is comprised of six young women and two young men from Pasadena. Miss Eleanor Hague, well-known authority on music derived from Spanish colonial lands, is the leader. This dance unit is known as the Jarabe Dancers, all are of Mexican extraction and will appear on all of the festival programs, and several had their first train ride when they boarded their Pullmans in Pasadena five days ago.

Mayan Ritual

Accompanying the dancers is Senorita Maria Bustos, a lyric soprano of unusual attainments. She and the others of the Pasadena visitors decry the statements that their music is derived from Spain. It is pure Mexican, they assert, and it stems from a culture that belongs to the North American continent.

The two young men with the Jarabe group, Ponce Espino and Carlos Tarin, presented a dance which moved the small invited preview audience to enthusiasm. It is an autentic Mayan ritual and in its exemplification the young men wear feather head-dresses and buskin-like footgear that were lent for the festival and which are rare and valuable museum pieces.

A group from Central Y. M. C. A. College in Chicago, appeared in French folk dances and the nimle youths fro mthe School of Organic education in Fairhope, Ala., seen at previous festivals, gave the finale of "Kirkby," famous English sword dance, and several clowning, swift Morris figures of a century ago.

The festival programs today are at 2 and 8:15 o'clock. The festival is sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

Conference Today Seeks Reopening Of Chest Clinic

Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator, will confer this morning on ways and means of continuing preliminary chest X-rays of local selective service men, it was announced last night.

Because of inadequate clerical and technical help, Dr. Ruhland said yesterday the X-ray services would have to be stopped. He said the District did not have sufficient funds to continue the examinations.

With WPA help, however, there is a chance that the X-ray clinic will be reopened in the near future, it was stated.

Since November 16, approximately 16,000 local selectees have been X-rayed at the District Picnic, Dr. Ruhland said. They also received examinations upon induction into the Army.

U. S. Employe Killed in Park Bridge Leap

A 29-year-old Washington man jumped to his death from the Park Road Bridge shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday. He was killed instantly when he landed almost in the center of Piney Branch Road Northwest, which passes beneath the span.

HORN

The man was identified by cards in a billfold as Hubert Winfred Horn, of 1957 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, a Government employe in a national defense agency.

A note found pinned to the billfold by District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who investigated, read "In case of accident please notify Mrs. Edith Horn." The telephone number was given.

Mr. Horn was graduated from the George Washington University here in June, 1937, and had majored in statistics. Prior to that, the university said, he had attended Yale University.

He is survived by his wife, of the Thirty-ninth Street address, an employe of the Treasury Department, and a 6-year-old son, Conrad.

Detectives conducted an investigation into the death when a colored laborer on a road project nearby reported he saw a man run from the bridge just after Horn fell. Police later learned the man was a witness who had gone to telephone them, they said, and Coroner MacDonald said he would issue a certificate of suicide.

No reason for Horn's act could be determined by police. He was in excellent humor when he left home yesterday morning, neighbors said, and had recently been offered a better position in another defense agency.

Shot in the abdomen by a policeman when he resisted arrest, Robert Gray, colored, 33, of 1725 U Street Northwest, was in critical condition at Freedmens' Hospital last night.

DAVIS

Gray was taken into custody by Patrolman Francis E. Davis, 28, of 2236 Nicholson Street Southeast, attached to the Second Precinct, at Thirteenth and Q Streets Northwest, on a disorderly conduct charge early yesterday.

According to Davis, Gray struck him in the face and ran. He was recaptured by the policeman in the 1600 block Twelfth Street Northwest, where a fight ensued. The prisoner, the police reports stated, took Davis' blackjack and struck the officer with it.

Gray grabbed Davis by the throat, the policeman reported, whereupon the latter took out his gun and fired two shots, one striking the colored man in the abdomen.

Pitka, a mesenger for a drug store, was riding his bicycle when he collided with a taxicab at New Jersey Avenue and M Street Northwest. The cab driver, Melvin L. McLanahan, 30, of 201 South Lee Street, Alexandria, Va., and Pitka were taken to Emergency Hospital where the driver was released after being treated for a severe laceration on the left elbow. Pitka was treated for a skull fracture and head laceration.

The 4-year-old colored child ran between two parked cars and into the street near Ninth and N Streets Northwest. The driver, Wilton W. Stotler, 28, of 219 Upshur Street Northwest, took the child to Freedmen's Hospital.

Loses Control of Tractor

Earl T. Lawton, 20, of Baltimore, Md., while operating an electric tractor in supply shop at Navy Yard, lost control of the car. He was treated at Providence for fractured left leg and contusions and abrasions on both legs.

Carrie Edwards, colored, 7, of 815 N Street Northwest, was injured while running across the street in front of her home. She was struck by a car operated by Sherman Brandon, colored, 19, of 1108 Half Street Northwest.

Nettie Lewis, colored, 67, of 496 C Street Southwest, was treated for lacerations at Casualty, where she was taken after being struck by a truck at Sixth and Virginia Avenue Southwest. Police said driver of the truck was Oldo Camana, 20, of 1882 Ontario Place Northwest.

Cecelia Peterson, colored, 2, of 50 Fenton Place Northeast, was struck by a taxi in front of her home. She was treated at Sibley for concussion.

Claude G. Mansfield, 21, 1377 Irving Street Northwest, who was brought to Casualty from an accident in Landon Park, Md., was treated for laceration over the right eye and forehead and multiple abrasions.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated Phillip Lawrence, colored, 22, of 2017 Allen Place Northwest, of blame in the traffic death of William E. Broderick, 17-year-old Western Union messenger, which was ruled accidental.

It was testified that the youth, who lived at 64 I Street Northwest, rode into the side of Lawrence's automobile at Orren and Oates Streets Northeast Tuesday.

Suit Filed To Acquire GAO Site

Proceedings Begun For Condemnation Of Private Property At 5th and H Streets

The Federal Government yesterday took the first step toward construction of a new General Accounting Office building at Fifth and H Streets Northwest with the filing of a condemnation suit of the property in District Court.

All privately owned land in Square 510 is involved except 200 feet on the east side of Fifth Street and 176 feet fronting H Street and G Place, the suit said.

Following the filing of the suit Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat directed all persons deeming themselves entitled to compensation to appear in District Court by May 29 to answer the Government's petition for condemnation.

The action was taken under order of Attorney General Jackson who acted at the request of Federal Works Administrator Carmody.

The condemnation suit was filed by Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell, Special Attorney Alexander H. Bell, jr., and Attorney Henry F. Mooney, all of the Lands Division of the Department of Justice.

The District will begin moving into its half of the new Municipal Center Building next Tuesday, it was announced by the Commissioners yesterday.

File cases and other office equipment will be the first items moved. The personnel of agencies assigned space probably will not take over their new quarters until May 19 after telephone connections have been installed the week-end of May 17-18, it was reported.

War Department offices which have been alloted the other half of the $5,000,000 structure for at least six months will begin moving equipment on May 15, according to latest advices. No date has been set for an estimated 1,500 War Department workers to move in.

Local agencies scheduled to take over are the Police Department, City Refuse Division, Traffic Department, labatories of the Health Department and headquarters staff of the Fire Department.

Steve Mamakos Wins a Decision Over Vigh

D. C. Battler Easy Victor Before 3,500

Ray Robinson Wins Over Joe Ghnouley; DeChard, Brookman Are Prelim Victors

By Tony Neri

Steve Mamakos, Washington's Golden Greek, fought what was perhaps the greatest fight of his career last night as he won an unanimous 10-round decision over hard-hitting Ernie Vigh, of Newburgh, N. Y., at Uline Arena before 3,500 cheering fans, which paid $5,034 to witness the bruising fight.

Mamakos showed the dauntless courage of his past fights here, plus a punch which had Vigh reeling in the ninth and tenth rounds.

The Washington boy took the lead from the opening gong and kept up a steady pace of lefts and rights which had his opponent baffled and unable to return blows. Then he survived a torrid eighth round when he took everything in Vigh's book only to come back and be the aggressor again. It was a new Mamakos last night.

Vigh Tries for K. O.

Vigh, sensing he needed a knockout in the last round to win, went after the Golden Greek for one last futile try, but again Stevie just kept boring in and punishing the New Yorkers' body with short lefts and rights.

Vigh crashed a staggering right on Mamakos' chin in the eighth but Steve just brushed it off and the ringsiders wondered how.

Mamakos didn't give the Newburgh youth a chance to get many clean blows. Although he kept coming in, Steve employed a different ring cunning—and Vigh slightly baffled by his inability to drop the Washington boy after having landed many heavy blows—took to the defensive and tried to stave off the rushing Steve.

But Mamakos didn't let up. Even in the three rounds in which The Post score sheet showed Vigh ahead, Steve rallied to offset great punches by Vigh.

Blows Find Mark

Although the Greek boy's blows didn't seem to phase Vigh in those early rounds, they all made their mark. Outside of the eighth round, and the fourth and seventh which were about even, Mamakos held sway.

It was a great fight and by virtue of Mamakos' victory he is in line for a shot at the middleweight title. Promoter Ray Alvis announced after the bruising 10 rounder that Mamakos would meet the winner of the Overlin Soose fight in an outdoor show at Griffith Stadium in June. The exact date will be announced later. Soose and Vigh meet May 9 in New York.

A classy fighter was introduced in the eight-round semifinal in the person of lightweight Ray (Sugar) Robinson, slugging New Yorker, and the highly touted colored star carried the applause of the crowd. Robinson used every solid punch in the book to return a technical knockout victory over Joe Ghnouley, St. Louis veteran. The end came in 2 minutes 7 seconds of the third round.

Robinson, former amateur champion of the Nation, punished the St. Louis veteran from the opening bell and Ghnouley was sent to the deck once in each round by virtue of crushing lefts and rights of Robin-

Christoforidis K.O.'s Romero

St. Louis, April 30 (AP).—Anton Christoforidis, recognized by the National Boxing Association as light-heavyweight champion of the world, knocked out Johnny Romero, Mexico City, in the second round of their scheduled ten-round nontitle bout here tonight after flooring the Mexican twice for the count of nine.

Christoforidis weighed 172¼ and Romero tipped the scales at 178¾.

Making his second start since he gained N. B. A. recognition with his startling victory over Melio Bettina at Cleveland last January, the Athens athlete flailed into Romero with both hands pumping like pistons. He floored the painfully surprised Mexican for a nine count in the first round, and again for another count of nine just after the bell sounded starting the second heat.

The end came in 2:31 of the second round.

Nats' Weird Play in 8th Brings Loss

1-1 Deadlock Fades As Chase Uncorks 2 Wild Pitches, Issues Two Walks

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Comiskey Park, Chicago, April 30. The Nats dropped a ball game to the White Sox this afternoon and, folks it was just as well that this one was played in the broad outdoors because it was no aroma of heliotrope that prevaded the premises as the Nats took their 5-1 beating.

Confidentially, the Washington atheltics—well, they did not play very good baseball. They ran the bases like strangers to the game, and in a couple of spots their fielding would have curdled mother's love. As for their pitching, well, we can describe that in two well chosen words—im-possible.

Ken Chase was pitching for the Nats and a fine time was had by all—the White Sox. Chase did a completely thorough job of pitching himself out of a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning by walking three batters, handing the White Sox a pair of runs on two wild pitches, and muffing a ground ball in the box that inspired all his troubles. He gave up four runs to the White Sox in the eighth before Bucky Harris got him out of there. Harris probably reasoned that Chase should be lifted before he killed somebody, or vice versa.

Was Hurling 3-Hit Ball

Until his pitching went completely sour in the seventh and eighth Chase was pitching three-hit ball with the aid of a pair of double plays and his wildness had not caught up with him in his duel with Left-handed Edgar Smith. But before he was given the rest of the day off in the ninth Chase had tossed ten bases on balls, three wild pitches and a pair of errors of his own making into the proceedings, to say nothing of the error he made in showing up.

The Nats gave Chase a 1-0 lead in the seventh and he pitched the tying run back at the White Sox promptly. He pitched a two-bagger to Smith, his pitching rival, to open the seventh, and a sacrifice and Appling's single to right got Smith home.

It was in the eighth that Chase lost his tie, his control and the ball game. With one out Rosenthal doubled to right and the panic was on. Chase unleashed a wild pitch that moved Rosenthal to third and then he got behind in the ball-and-strike count on Kreevich and passed him purposely. Deliverance from his trouble stared him in the face when Tresh punched a grounder into the box, but Chase failed to come up with the ball cleanly and the winning run scored. But the White Sox weren't through.

Chase Throws Wild Pitch

With Smith up, Chase uncorked another wild pitch and another run scored. He walked Smith and Appling to fill the bases with two out, and Joe Kuhel put the slug on him for a single to right that scored the third and fourth runs of the inning and moved Chase to the showers. Bill Zuber finally got the side out despite Rick Ferrell's muff of Solter's foul pop.

Paradoxically, the Nats outhit the White Sox, eight to seven, but they were making the least of their hits with a brand of base running that smacked of the sandlots. Just to give you an idea, the Nats made their lone run from the combined efforts of three singles, a double and an error in the seventh inning.

Washington's base running sins commenced in the sixth when they successfully avoided scoring a run. Rick Ferrell led off with a double to left but was trapped off second base on Chase's pop bunt which Smith caught. In an attempt for a double play, Smith threw to second, but wild, and the ball rocketed into center field. Ferrell scampered for third, but neglected the formality of tagging up at second base first, a rule that has been in the books for only 40-odd years, and was perched on third when he discovered he was out at second.

The Nats' seventh inning, in which they made their lone run, was

Indians' Last-Ditch Rally Beats A's, 6-5

Two Out in 9th—None On—Then Things Happen Including Keltners' Home Run

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 30.—The customers were walking out because the league-leading Cleveland Indians were two runs behind, had nobody on base and two were out in the ninth. But the Philadelphia Athletics never got that last man. The Tribe won, 6 to 5.

Ken Keltner's 400-foot home run into the left-center wooden bleachers at League Park broke up the game and defeated Lester McCrabb, Connie Mack's rookie pitcher, after he had been ahead all the way.

The Athletics had a 5-to-3 lead and the first two Indians in the ninth went out so tamely that everyone was certain they didn't have a chance. But, thanks to earlier homers by Roy Weatherly and Jeff Heath, it was salvaged into their sixth straight triumph.

Yankees Take Browns, 7-1; Gordon Stars

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 30.—The New York Yankees opened up their bag of bats today and mauled the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 1, with a 14-hit attack led by Joe Gordon.

The Flash batted in four runs with a homer and three singles in five times at bat. George Selkirk also homered and Joe DiMaggio hit a double and a single. In fact all the Yanks except Gerry Priddy participated in the attack.

Chisox Buy Hoag and Ross; Release Two

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 30.—The Chicago White Sox, who earlier in the day announced the purchase of Outfielder Myril Hoag and Pitcher Lee (Bucky) Ross, made room for them tonight by optioning out two rookies—Pitcher Walter Navie and Outfielder Dave Short.

Navie, a southpaw, was sent to Shreveport and Short to Oklahoma City, the same clubs (Texas League) from which they were purchased by the Sox last fall.

Acquisition of Hoag and Ross marked the end of persistent efforts by Manager Jimmy Dykes to obtain additional outfield and pitching strength for the Sox, now pressing Cleveland for the American League lead.

Hoag, 32, has spent nine seasons in the American loop—seven with the New York Yankees and two with the St. Louis Browns, from where he was purchased by the Hose. He batted .262 for the Browns a year ago and holds a life-time average of .285 in the majors.

Ross, 26-year-old right-hander obtained from Philadelphia's Athletics, had a five-year record of 34 wins and 64 defeats with the A's. Both players will report tomorrow.

Tigers to Raise Pennant Flag, Minus Greenberg

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 30.—As matters now stand Hank Greenberg will enter the Army May 7—the day the Detroit Tigers hoist their 1940 American League pennant to the top of the Briggs Stadium flagstaff.

There were reports that Army induction officials might grant Hank a temporary delay to permit him to play in that day's game, but Capt. D. M. Jacques, in charge of the induction center, said today that would be "discriminating in his (Greenberg's) favor."

Capt. Jacques also said he did not approve of a suggestion to induct Hank before the contest and then excuse him to go to the ball park for the game.

Griff Lauds Radbourne

Chicago, April 30.—When 71-year-old Clark Griffith was a 15-year-old tyke in Bloomington, Ill., 56 years ago, the hero of the townspeople was a big, shaggy-haired fellow named "Old Hoss" Radbourne, who happened also to be the greatest living baseball player in the world. Bloomington was proud of Old Hoss. And tomorrow they're unveiling a plaque in his honor, and Mr. Griffith will be the speaker of the day.

POVICH

The Old Hoss must have been wonderful. The Nats' owner, who in time came to be the leading pitcher in the American League in 1901, still speaks with reverence when he speaks of Radbourne. "There warn't a pitcher like him," says Griffith, who lapses into the vernacular of the early West when he speaks of old-timers. "He was the greatest pitcher that ever lived."

This week Griffith is painstakingly preparing a speech in Radbourne's tribute. He will tell how, as a lad in old Bloomington more than a half-century ago, he used to hang breathlessly on Radbourne's every word when came October and Old Hoss had returned from the baseball wars. "I was one of the Bloomington kids who wanted to be a pitcher like Old Hoss, and he used to tell us to pitch with our heads as well as our arms. He'd show us how to watch a batter's feet and tell what kind of a ball he wasn't in position to hit. Then he'd tell us how to throw that kind of a ball."

The spoiled and pampered darlings of modern big league pitching, who rest their arms between alternate Tuesdays and Saturdays, must marvel at the Old Hoss. Only one pitcher in modern years—Lefty Grove—has won as many as 20 ball games. In 1884 Radbourne won sixty, during an 80-game season. He won 26 in succession before losing a five-hit game to Buffalo, which was then in the National League. Old Hoss did his pitching for Providence, and it is superflous to note that his 60 victories in '84 won the pennant that year for Providence.

"And when he wasn't pitching, he was playing the outfield," says Griffith. He never had a sore arm in his life. Don't forget, that when Old Hoss was winning, a pitcher had to turn the ball loose from below his waist with a side-arm motion. He couldn't come in overhand, because that was against the rules. It never bothered Old Hoss, though. He was a natural sidewinder.

Johnson Was Natural Side-Armer

"Fact is," adds Griffith, "that Walter Johnson would have been a great pitcher back in those old days. Just as great as he was when he starred in the big leagues. Johnson was a natural side-armer. He let his fast ball go a little below the waist and that would have been a legal pitch. It was only along about 1920 when Johnson started to lose his fast ball, that he became an overhand pitcher. Every year after 1920 Johnson would bring his arm higher, until toward the finish of his career he was throwing an overhand curve ball which he hadn't tried in the first 17 years he was in the big leagues."

Back in Radbourn's day a fellow had to be all ball player, not a pitching specialist, Griffith pointed out. "Those were the days when the catcher didn't play behind the batter. He was up against the backstop until somebody got on base. Then he'd step behind the plate with a hunk of rubber in his mouth to protect his teeth in case of a foul ball. When the catcher was playing far back there was nothing to prevent batters from laying down bunts in front of the plate. Pitchers had to field those bunts, without any help from the catcher, and fellows like Willie Keeler and Jess Burkett could lay those bunts down on a dime in front of the plate. A pitcher had to be a great fielder."

It wasn't until 1901 when the American League began to function, Griffith pointed out with pride, that the majors changed the rule and brought the catchers up behind the plate at all times. "We showed the National League that it would speed up the game, and they finally adopted it," says Griffith. "It's well we did, because the modern day pitcher wouldn't know what to do with some of those bunts that the catcher now handles."

Pitched No-Hitter With Sore Arm

Inevitably, Griffith back-tracked to Walter Johnson when he speaks of pitching, and he pointed out that Johnson, like Radbourne, was never troubled by a sore arm except on one occasion. That was, paradoxically, in 1920, when Johnson pitched the only no-hit game of his career.

"I was managing the club when Walter pitched that no-hitter against Boston," said Griffith. "After the game I sent Johnson home, because I wanted him to be ready for the Fourth of July game against the Yankees. It was to be his first start after his no-hitter, and we had advertised that Johnson would pitch, and we had the park filled. Imagine my embarrassment before the game when Walter came to me and told me his arm was so sore he couldn't lift it to comb his hair. I couldn't ask him to pitch.

"I sent Al Schacht out to face the Yankees that afternoon, and when his name was announced in the Washington battery I thought the boos would blow us out of the park. The fans had come to see Johnson, and they didn't want anything else. But I couldn't ask him to pitch. When Schacht went to the mound, it was awful. The worst boos I ever heard. Schacht earned a job with me for the next 15 years because of what he did that day. He pitched the only good game he had in his system, and beat the Yankees, 4 to 1, and at the finish the crowd lugged him off the field on their shoulders."

Dodgers Beat Reds for Ninth Straight Victory, Lose Lead

Brooklyn Marks Anniversary of Last Year's 9th Straight Triumph

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 30.—Celebrating the anniversary of their ninth straight victory at the start of the 1940 season, the Brooklyn Dodgers assaulted Johnny Vander Meer in the last two innings today to clip the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3, for their ninth straight success of 1941.

But by a peculiarity of percentages, the Dodgers drifted back to second place in the National League standings, even though in games won and lost they remained a full notch ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals, who downed the New York Giants, 6 to 4.

The Redbirds, who have lost only three games and won ten, have a percentage of .769. The Dodgers, with four lost and 13 won, have .765.

It was today a year ago that Tex Carleton, then a Dodger, pitched his no-hitter against these same Reds at Cincinnati to climax Brooklyn's great getaway.

The Dodgers were determined to duplicate that spring of last year and, even though they were smothered for seven innings, they got what they wanted.

Carleton Hero in 1940

With one out in the eighth Dixie Walker dropped his third home run of the season behind the score board in right field, Harry Lavagetto walked and Joe Medwick, swaggering to the plate, slammed the second pitch into the left-field stands for his third circuit clout of the year to tie the score at three-all.

In the last of the ninth Mickey Owen led off with a double that rolled into the left-field bull pen. Vander Meer was removed for Joe Beggs, who made relief pitcher, Hugh Casey, pop foul, but served a double to Reese for the winning run.

The victory was credited to Casey, last of four Dodger hurlers who saw service, and was fourth of the season against no defeats. He plodded to the mound in the ninth after Lee Grissom had walked two men and got Frank McCormick and Ernie Lombardi on long flies.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 30.—The heavyweight division is straightening out, but only like the tip of a corkscrew. The Joe Louis-Buddy Bear match has been signed and sealed for Washington's Griffith Stadium on May 23. The Louis-Conn, Louis-Nova and Louis-Simon fights are still officially homeless and dateless. The managers of the respective challengers are willing to accept any date, just so long as it is the best.

CONSIDINE

Johnny Ray, who manages Conn, wired Jacobs recently that Conn would withdraw himself from the heavyweight title picture if Louis fought anybody before he met Conn. This smacks of second-rate ballyhoo, of course, but Jacobs was surprised enough by the wire to curse Ray picturesqualy for five or ten minutes, and not in the presence of a reporter, either.

Jacobs promptly closed the Louis-Buddy Bear fight, and, to date, Conn has not yet announced his intention of becoming a truck driver. At the same time Mike indicated that while the bum-of-the-month aura might pervade the Louis-Baer match, the bum-of-the-month price scale will not prevail. Top priced tickets will sell for $15 at the Washington first, which is three or four times as much as patrons usually pay to see fights there, and $10 more than top price at the Louis-Musto fight. But the fight will go big, there.

Mike is in Washington today, stating that he's going to talk about only one Louis fight at a time. We can't understand Jacobs' hesitancy about lining up his summer dates. It's a cinch that he's not confused by the high pressuring of the challengers' managers. He has them pretty well in his paw. Perhaps the reason is that he has a hunch or a knowledge of Louis' induction into the Army. It is possible that he figures that if he unleashes Louis and Joe knocks out all those guys, the heavyweight game will go completely to pot while Joe is serving his year in camp. But, on the other hand, if Joe skips a Conn or a Nova, and belts out the others, the fighter he skipped will sort of assume the mantle of the championship while Joe is away. That will keep the division going along during the champion's absence and if the pretender to the throne wins a couple in the meantime, it will make a big fight when Louis is discharged from Army service.

While Louis is away in camp you can expect to hear more from Max Baer. Incredible as it sounds, Baer probably will be back in New York fighting somebody before too many months have passed. Max has entered upon a strange role as a fighter. The public which once railed at him as a quitter has tempered its anger to the point of admiring him for the eccentricity of the show he produces at every fight. The fellow is a great, genuine, hammy clown. He knows he can pick up at least $30,000 a year for the next few years, doing nothing more than mauling guys who couldn't knock off their grandmothers' bonnets, or taking an occasional pasting from one of the better kids and finding a soft spot on the canvas on which to recline.

It may not be fighting, this thing that Max does, but it'll fill New York's Madison Square Garden every time he shows his nose there. So he'll be back. The first person to reach him after Lou Nova mauled Max into what appeared to be Max's third and final eclipse was Mike Jacobs. "Listen, none of that stuff about retiring," Jacobs snapped, before the reporters came in. Bear was all for that. When the press arrived Max was ready. "Washed up as I am, I'm going to keep fighting," Bear said with wonderful bluntness.

The next impetus for Max's inevitable comeback was given by Dr. Julius B. Harris, of Sacramento, who impressed press and public alike by stating that in the Nova fight Max suffered a fracture of the ossicle on the ventral surface, anterior border of the sixth cervical vertebra, and a detachment of a traumatic arthritic bridge extending from the sixth to the seventh cervical vertebra." So how could a fellow fight with a fracture of the ossicle, etc., etc., etc., etc.?

St. Alban's Loses, 7-4, To Episcopal

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., April 30.—Nicked for four hits and three runs in the first two innings, Dick West settled down and hurled two-hit ball over the remaining seven frames today, as Episcopal High School baseballists came from behind to defeat St. Alban's by a 7-to-4 margin on Hoxton Field. It was the Maroons' fifth triumph in eight starts.

A converted shortstop, West, got off to a shaky start when the Saints utilized two hits and an error to score two runs in the first inning, and added another run in the second on a pair of safeties. He set the visitors down in order in the third, however, and allowed the Saints a pair of singles over the remainder of the contest.

Army Nine Wins Over Colgate, 7 to 5

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

West Point, N. Y., April 30.—Army's baseball team bounced back in the winning column here today after three straight defeats, downing Colgate 7 to 5.

Jim Studer, making his first start of the season for the Cadets, was the winning pitcher, but Johnny Atkinson, who started the sixth inning, was the star. He set down all 12 Colgate batters who faced him in the final 4 innings without a hit, struck out 3 and walked only 1.

Mrs. Whitney Buys Bradley's On Trial At Rocky Mount

Making a triumphant exit from the Gallopade Horse Show ring in Rocky Mount, N. C., after winning the go-as-you please jumping, Donald Bradley's brown mare, On Trial, was immediately sold to Mrs. Altemus Whitney, of Llangollen Farm, Upperville, Va., yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Whitney's eye was first caught by the quiet-mannered halfbred at the Lynchburg (Va.) show last weekend, when she jumped off with Margaret Cotter's Rocksie at 6 feet in the knockdown-and-out event.

Bradley, from Silver Spring, Md., will continue to ride On Trial at the Hampton and Washington horse shows. After that Mrs. Whitney's rider, Roland Ridgeway, will take over the handling.

Charlotte Hall, Devitt Tie At 12-All

The Devitt and Charlotte Hall nines stopped with the score 12-all in a seven inning game yesterday on the West Ellipse. The visitors held leads of 7-3 and 12-6 but Devitt blasted Cady's offerings for 17 hits and finally tied it up in the last of the seventh just before the permit on the diamond expired.

Jack Kowaleski had a perfect day at bat for Devitt with three singles, a double and triple. Smith also posted a double and triple for the visitors.

George Washington Scores 6 Runs in 8th to Beat Maryland

Terps Lose, 7-1, as Smith Is Pounded

McGinnis Goes Route For Colonial Nine; 4 Straight Singles Figure in Rally

By Jack Munkall

In a startling transition of form Maryland's hapless baseball team yesterday dropped a 7-1 decision to George Washington's improved Colonials.

With Griffith Stadium as an appropriate backdrop, the Terrapins played in big league style for seven innings but reverted to the sandlot motif in the eighth as the Colonials chased across six runs to transform a pitcher's duel into a rout.

Stocky Bob Smith, the Old Liners' football star, was the chief victim of G. W.'s late uprising. Smith had pitched great ball in competition with Frank McGinnis and the score was tied 1-1 when he got his ears pinned back. McGinnis finished up with a five-hitter.

Walk Starts Trouble

The first walk Smith issued, a pass to George Oertel, placed him in trouble. Adding to his predicament he messed up an attempted sacrifice by Roy McNeil. Jimmy Dowd poped out and there should have been two outs at that point, but then the fun began for the Colonials.

Limited to six hits for seven innings, the Colonials lashed out with successive singles by Johnny Picco, Eddie Amendola—his third safety—Jack Fitzerald and Len Sokol. These, together with two more walks and a wild pitch by Max Hunt, who relieved Smith with two outs and after the tenth Colonial had batted produced the cluster of six tallies.

McGinnis himself seemed on the verge of collapse in the ninth but a bit of weird base running by Maryland plus a circus catch by G. W. Leftfielder Len Sokol prevented trouble.

Dwyer's Hit in Vain

After Leib MacDonald had popped out to start the inning for the Terps, Frank Dwyer punched a liner to the center field angle. Fast fielding by George Oertel returned the ball to the infield much sooner than Dwyer or the Maryland third base coach realized and the runner was one-third the way home when he saw his mistake. Still he had plenty of time to regain third but, refusing to slide, was tagged out by Fitzgerald on a relay from Oertel to Lee to Lusby to Jim Dowd.

Saved once, McGinnis received additional aid a moment later when Sokol turned his back to the plate in the shadow of the left field stands where the sign reads "422 feet" to haul down DuVall's savage blast.

It was the same DuVall, who back in the second inning had made possible Maryland's only run, by tripling down the third base line and scoring on Bill England's single.

Double Steal Helps

The Colonials deadlocked the count in their half of the inning on a tained run coming across on a double steal. Amendola counted as Lusby swiped second, but a poor throw by MacDonald was of no little help to the theft.

After that the game was all McGinnis and Smith for the next five innings as they set the batsmen down without much trouble. A pair of double plays, featured by the fielding of third baseman "Pop" Wharton, the defensive star of the day, helped Smith, while McGinnis also was getting good support.

scarcely a pride-taking session. Cramer led off with a single to left and for no reason at all tried to take third on Welaj's single to short right. He was thrown out by a dozen feet. Lewis grounded out and Welaj smartly raced all the way from first to third on Lodigiani's throw to Kuhel. When Kuhel threw wild to third in an attempt to flag down Welaj, that young man scrambled to his feet and scampered home on the error.

As events turned out, the Nats would have preferred that the inning end at the point, but unhappily it didn't. Pofhal followed with a single to center and when Bloodworth doubled to right, Pofahl was waved home by a Washington coach, who overrated his speed. Pofahl was caught at the plate. Oh, yeah, in that ninth inning Rick Ferrell had Luke Appling trapped off third base at one point and decided to race him back to the bag instead of throwing the ball. Appling was killing, and Ferrell landed the place.

Our Boots' Stock Soars as Field For Derby Dwindles to Eleven

Agricole Out; Poll of Trainers Heavily Supports Kentucky-Bred Colt as One to Beat

By the United Press

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—As the probable Kentucky Derby field dwindled to 11 starters today, the men who know horseflesh best—the Derby trainers—unanimously proclaimed Kentucky-bred Our Boots as the colt to beat in Saturday's run for the roses.

Latest of the lesser-known candidates to drop out was Shady Brook Stable's speedster, Agricole, leaving 11 live ones almost certain to parade to the post. Noted for his early foot, Agricole was given little chance to stand up to the pace beyond the back stretch drive and Trainer George Brooks decided to hold him out of the Derby.

Of the 11 left, Our Boots rates as the one to be feared. His own trainer, of course, thinks the stocky bay son of Bull Dog is the best thing in the barns at Churchill Downs and his rivals speak almost as highly.

Porter's Cap Second in Poll

Charles S. Howard's Porter's Cap, a solid colt equally skillful in mud or table-top footing, ran a close second in the poll of trainers. Tom Bragg's Blue Pair, victor in the Derby trial Tuesday, and Richard Kleberg's Dispose were mentioned as outside possibilities.

In nominating Our Boots, the trainers went against a double jinx stacked against the Royce G. Martin star. No Belmont Futurity winner ever has come through in the Derby, and that jinx alone operated against such promising colts as Pompoon, Bimelech, Menow and Singing Wood. Further, colts with Bull Dog blood rarely are routers capable of withstanding the 1¼-mile Derby rush.

Beyond saying Our Boots was a great racer, Trainer Steve Judge made no predictions. This spare, white-haired trainer sees it as "a very hard horse race."

Max Hirsch, who saddled Bold Venture for his Derby victory in 1936 and is trying again with Dispose, is high on Our Boots and Blue Pair. Rocky Palladino, only owner-trainer in the field, thinks his Little Beans will have Our Boots to beat, with Dispose something to watch.

Ben Jones, of Calumet Farms, his hands full with temperamental Whirlaway, picks Our Boots and Porter's Cap. So does George Strate, saddling Hugh Nesbitt's Staretor. Silent Tom Smith, who calls Porter's Cap "the best-conditioned horse I've ever sent to the races," added a vote in the Our Boots column.

G. W. Frosh Nine Routs Georgetown

George Washington's freshmen diamonders pounded the offerings of three Georgetown frosh hurlers to rout the Hoyas, 19 to 6, yesterday. The Colonials made 16 hits and benefited from 11 errors.

Robertson accounted for stick honors for the winners with a double, triple and three singles in five times at bat. Erhardt went the route for the winners, allowed nine hits and struck out 12.

Horse Trainer Is Suspended At Jamaica

By the Associated Press

Jamaica Racetrack, N. Y., April 30.—The New York State Racing Commission today, after a meeting attended by Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman; John Sloan, Assistant Attorney General John F. X. McGohey, Marshall Cassidy and John F. Shevlin, sitting on the case of High Blame, which ran and won in the second race on Wednesday, April 23, made the following announcement:

"The presence of caffeine having been found in the test of the 3-year-old High Blame, J. A. Coburn, trainer, has been suspended indefinitely and denied the privileges of the racetrack. William Livingston, the horse's groom, also has been suspended indefinitely.

"Since the horse's ownership was in the name of Coburn's wife, Mrs. J. A. Coburn, under the rules of racing, it was decided to suspend Mrs. Coburn's horses from racing privileges during the suspension of her husband.

"Following the regular precedent, all horses of other ownerships in the hands of J. A. Coburn have been suspended until they are placed with a trainer approved by the commission."

The Dodger Fans Are Happy Again

Brooklyn Already Pennant Crazy After 9th Straight

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer
By International News Service

The town of Brooklyn is hotter than a blacksmith's leather apron today. The Dodgers ran their winning streak up to nine and again knocked the Reds down like a hound's ears.

That's three in a stretch for the Reds who came East prouder than the mothers of the Quiz kids.

The Reds had everything laid out as pretty as City Hall lawn until the eighth inning. It was three to nothing and the loyal Brooklyn fans were acting like they would never have the gumption to face themselves in a barroom mirror again.

Then Lavagetto walked and Walker and Medwick touched up Johnny Vander Meer for a couple of four-cornered ankle excursions.

Vander Meer was still there in the ninth which was gander consomme for the Brooklyns. What a fellow likes for lunch he will certainly like for supper. And before Johnny was streeted Owen tapped him for a double. Then Beggs came in and Reese took the same. His double scored Reiser who ran for Owen.

Brooklyn is wilder than mountain blueberries these days and is rooting for another over the Reds. Only the Cards are near them and the Dodger fans fear them no more than eggs for breakfast.

Hughie Casey got credit for the ninth straight win after he went in for Grissom who went in for Brown who went in for Higbe. Casey actually pitched the entire game, but eight innings of it were in the bullpen.

Now, all the Dodger fans have to do is get by May, June, July and August and the works are in like a cat coming out of the rain. That's easy in a town like Brooklyn where a hope is an option and a wish is a bill of sale.

Why, the Dodger management has already studied blueprints for enlarging the grandstand and has borrowed the plush ropes from Radio City Music Hall.

Brooklyn was runner-up to the Reds last season. Now they're running 'em down.

Mamakos Wins Decision Over Vigh

son. Robinson weighed 135 and Ghnouley, 135½.

Jimmy DeChard, good-looking Washington heavyweight, won his second professional fight when he stopped 200-pounder Nick Carter in 46 seconds of the third round.

The former Golden Gloves Champion had his man out in the second heat but the bell saved the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., heavyweight. DeChard used an assortment of blows in the victory. A left to the stomach ended the one-sided affair.

Chris Dundee, manager of middleweight champion Ken Overlin, unveiled his newly acquired heavyweight hope, Willie Babe Ritchie in the third six-rounder and his 212-pound charge gained a split decision over Young Foster, St. Louis colored battler.

Ritchie showed he possessed a good right hand but it was evident he was plenty green. Foster lost the fourth on low blows.

El Brookman's six-round decision over Frankie Wills in the second bout on the program was met by an elongated bray from the customers. Brookman had survived a bristling early attack by Wills which had the winner's face cut around the eyes. Both boys were from Washington.

Banks Wins Opener

Brookman's rally in the fourth and sixth swung the decision his way. Brookman weighed 150 and Wills, 146.

Billy Banks scored a technical knockout over Louie Otero, Puerto Rican featherweight, in 1:32 of the second round in the curtain raiser. Banks had his man down twice in the first round for counts of seven. A right to the chin sent the Puerto Rican down the last time before Referee Ray Bowen stopped the fight. Otero came in weighing 123, and Banks 128¾.

The New Deal Men's Shop quintet took high team game after a 595 pinfall.

PREMIER CAB

The Burlington boys earned most of the honors in the Premier Cab League at Penn Recreation, for Lackey's 140 high single helped his first place Burlington team to highs of 544 and 1,591, even though the Eighth and East Capitol quintet beat them three straight games. Rodano, Rock Creek Church Road, was best man for the set with a total of 348.

Spencer's 68 Beats Patty Berg, Doerer

East Potomac Pro Shoots 4-Under-Par

Partner Dettweiler Has 79; Miss Berg Cards 75 Despite Putter Trouble

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Cliff Spencer treated the girl pros, Helen Dettweiler and Patty Berg, to a subpar show yesterday over his home East Potomac layout, six birdies and a 4-under-par 68 which helped him and Miss Dettweiler hand a 1-up defeat to Miss Berg and Tommy Doerer, jr.

Patty played the B and D courses, measuring some 6,500 yards, in 75 strokes, despite some spotty chipping and putting. She was knocking her drives way down the middle and her second shots on the pin, but the Minneapolis red-head was jinxed with a putter. With better luck around the greens she could have easily matched par figures.

Spencer was a picture of perfection for 16 of the 18 holes. He went over on the second and eighth but he made up for the lost shots with six birdies, chipping in the cup on the eleventh hole and dropping four putts of between 10 and 20 feet.

Patty and Doerer, who turned in a 74, alternated nicely as partners with a best ball 68 and they led, 1 up, at the turn when Tommy dropped consecutive birdie putts of 20 and 10 feet on the seventh and eighth holes. Spencer evened the match by chipping in the cup on the eleventh and won it on the long seventeenth when he slid an approach shot within 4 feet of the cup and trickled a putt in for his sixth birdie.

Helen Dettweiler played nice golf going out with a 38, but she missed pars on five holes of the return trip and finished with a 79.

A crowd which matched Sunday's turnout at Kenwood during the early stages of the match watched Patty, playing the flat layout for the first time which made distances deceiving, live up to her clippings with many perfect golf shots. A bad break on the seventeenth hole where a fine chip shot took a bad kick and a short put glanced off the hole was her only difference with par on the back nine. Patty dropped her only putt of the day on the preceding hole, a 25-footer which halved Spencer's four.

Spencer was hitting his fee shots in his usual siege-gun fashion but his main forte was chip shots that danced a jig on the green and then settled beside the cup, plus his birdie putting touch.

Early Splurge Beats Giants For Cards, 6-4

By International News Service

New York, April 30.—A three-run splurge in the first inning put the St. Louis Cardinals off in front today and they went on to a 6 to 4 victory over the New York Giants without ever trailing.

The Giants nudged up to within a single run of a tie in the seventh when Babe Young drove in two mates with a home run, but the Cards capitalized on 12 hits made off Hal Schumacher, including home runs by Enos Slaughter and Johnny Mize, both with the bases empty.

Sam Nahem hurled the Cardinal victory, although he was yanked in the ninth.

While the Cardinals remained a game behind the victorious Brooklyn Dodgers in the standings, they advanced to first place on a percentage basis, the margin being 4 points.

Cubs Defeat Braves (Bees), By 9-4 Score

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 30.—The Chicago Cubs, who had dropped six of their seven previous starts, ruined the Boston Braves' rechristening party today by belting four of their pitchers for a 9-4 triumph.

Although the temperature, due to a sudden shift of the wind, dropped 33 degrees in 12 minutes just before game-time, the Cubs opened in heated fashion and clinched the game by driving starter Manny Salvo from the box in the first inning. They scored four runs in the first on two hits and three passes and added a fifth tally in the third. Nick Strincevich, the Braves' third chucker, was pounded for four more runs in the eighth.

Rams Vote To Sell Club To Syndicate

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 30.—The Cleveland Rams' directors have voted in effect to sell the National Professional Football League Club to a syndicate headed by Dan Reeves, of New York, it was learned today.

Informed sources predicted the club would play its 1941 schedule here before the prospective new owners decide whether to move the franchise to Boston, as intended originally.

Directors representing two-thirds of the Rams' stockholders have voted to request the syndicate to put its formal offer into writing for submission to a stockholders' meeting. The offer, believed to call for about $150,000, would more than cover the Rams' losses of about $125,000 for their four seasons in the league.

Local football circles understood that if the Rams make money here this fall the franchise might be kept in Cleveland indefinitely. Boston was represented in pro football's No. 1 league until the club was moved to Washington several seasons ago.

Phillies Whip Pirates, 8-4, Blanton Hurls

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 30.—The Philadelphia Nationals rose up in the seventh inning today to score four runs and take their second straight game from Pittsburgh's Pirates, 8—4, before a ladies' day throng of 3,385.

Cy Blanton went the route against his former Pirate teammates, keeping ten hits well scattered and getting six strikeouts. Outfielder Bob Elliott clouted his first home run of the year in the fifth with one aboard.

Relief Pitcher Dick Lanahan was credited with the loss. He went in after Bob Klinger was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth and gave up four hits which the Phils turned into the same number of runs.

Elbie Fletcher, Pirates' first baseman, led both clubs at the plate with three safeties in four times at bat, but it was his wild throw in the seventh that let in what proved to be the winning run.

Saguenay II Captures Gittings Handicap at Pimlico Course

French-Bred Horse Beats Royal Man

Honey Cloud Runs Third; Fenelon, Favorite, Beaten By 10 Lengths

Special Dispatch to The Post

Pimlico, Md., April 30.—The 9,000 fans here today came to see a preview of the Dixie Handicap and they were not disappointed when the sixth race, the Gittings Handicap, was run. The French-bred Saguenay II, owned by R. Sterling Cark, held on in a hard stretch drive to withstand the rush of Tower Stable's Royal Man. Mrs. A. J. Abe's Honey Cloud, the pacemaker, was a game third.

The field of five, all eligibles for the Dixie, came out of the gate in alignment, but the veteran Honey Cloud sprinted into a comfortable lead going to the first turn, with the favored Fenelon going between horses to get closest to the pace. Freddie Smith, on Saguenay II, was out in the center of the track and had a handful of the Clark colorbearer when they straightened out into the stretch. Jockey Stout, on Fenelon, was in tight quarters and had to take up in the run down the back stretch.

Favorite Fades Back

Leaving the back stretch, Royal Man challenged and the favorite dropped out of contention, with Westnesia still trailing. From the three-eighths pole home it was a ding-dong battle, with Honey Cloud on the inside, Saguenay II in the middle and Royal Man on the extreme outside.

The Frenech-bred got his nose in front at the sixteenth pole and Jockey Smith pumped on his mount to just last. The race, run over an extremely fast track, was covered in 1.44 2-5 for the mile and one-sixteenth and the winner returned his scattered backers $26.10 for each $2. Fenelon was beaten a total of 10 lengths in the role of favorite. The victory was worth $2,500 to Owner Clark.

Favorites provided the winners in the first and second races and the daily double pay-off was a mere $13.20 for the usual deuce. S. W. Labrot's Sunset Boy proved the luckiest of the dozen maiden juveniles gathered for the first event. He had clear sailing and drew out approaching the stretch. Pretty Lady, which had trouble early, closed with a brilliant rush and just missed getting up. Elder was third. The winner paid $5.60.

Ebonito, a son of Flying Ebony, went slumming in the second race. The handicap performer of last year was reported to have bad legs, but this did not steer the crowd off him. They made him an even-money favorite, and he came bouncing home, guided by Jockey Woodrow Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md. Challante was second, beaten a half length. Third money went to Knitetta.

A second choice proved the winner of the third event, the day's steeplechase. The Groton Stable's Salem, well handled by Jockey F. Maier, won by eight lengths.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Golden Neal, which fell during the running of the steeplechase Tuesday, was found to have suffered a fractured leg this morning and was destroyed. Trainer John Bosley is not sure whether the horse suffered the break in his spill or met with a further injury in his stall last night, as he was only slightly lame after the race. Golden Reel was owned by Mrs. Van Lear Black. Mrs. H. Bentall Marshall, niece of the late Jervis Spencer, will present the trophy Friday to the winner of the Spencer Steeplechase Handicap, honoring the late famous Maryland sportsman and chairman of the State racing commission. Word has been received from Wilmington that Fairy Chant is the only member of the Foxcatcher Farms Stable Dick Handlen has in training and the 4-year-old daughter of Chance Shot continues to be regarded as a possible starter in the Dixie Handicap. Alfred Vanderbilt received word from Charles S. Howard that his mare, Queen Helen, has foaled a colt by Identify at the latter's ranch in California. Vanderbilt shipped the mare West to be bred to Seabiscuit. In answer to inquiry: Big Pebble won the $50,000 added Widener this year, beating Pay Off, a stablemate. Big Pebble was riden by George Seabo and not Rocco Sisto. Mioland, the West Coast's principal candidate for handicap honors this season, displayed a sparkling performance yesterday morning in preparation for his engagement next Wednesday in the $20,000 added Dixie Hndicap. The 4-year-old Oregon-bred colt went a mile and a furlong in 1.53 3-5, and needs but very little more wosk to be fit for his engagement over the mile and three-sixteenths route, according to Roy Turner, chief assistant to Trainer Tom Smith, who is at Louisville looking after Porter's Cap. Charles S. Howard's sturdy campaigner, winner of the San Juan Capistrano Handicap after losing a close decision to Bay View in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, was doing his best in finishing out the lengthy trial, but this was desired by Turner, and was not surprising, considering the steady pace he had pursued. See you on the rail.

BILL.

ROY B. WHITE

DANIEL WILLARD

By the Associated Press

New York, April 30.—New chapters were written today in two typical American success stories as Daniel C. Willard, dean of the country's railroad presidents, stepped upward to chairman of he Baltimore & Ohio and left his place in the active management of the road to Roy B. White, now head of the Western Union Telegraph Co.

For Willard the step was a climax to a transportation career that began 61 years ago when he became a track laborer in his home town, North Hartland, Vt. Of Willard's 80 years, 30 have been spent as president of the B. & O.

He said recently: "I have been offering my resignation every year since I was 70, but they don't follow my suggestions."

Willard Not Retiring

He is not retiring now. As chairman he will continue to have a hand in general policies while White will take on the more direct responsibilites of operating the road as soon as he can end his duties as president of the big communications company he has headed since 1933.

In taking over at B. & O., White, who started out as a telegraph operator in 1900, is returning to old associates. He was president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, an affiliate of the B. & O., from 1926 to 1933 and had been dith the B. & O. and its predecessors and affiliates since he started pounding a Morse key at Dana, Ind., on the Indiana, Decatur & Western Railway. He was born on that road, too, at Metcalf, Ill., 57 years ago.

Careers Are Similar

Willard looks like he won the nickname "Uncle Dan" honestly. Spare, of medium height, his shrewd blue eyes look through metal-rimmed glasses. He seems a good ten years short of his eight decades, and works at his office daily, although some of his outside activities have been curtailed recently. His clothes are subdued, meticulously neat, and he wears an old-fashioned gold watch chain with a metal pin through the button-hole of his vest, for all the world like one of his own conductors.

Both Publicity Shy

White, a strapping, 200-pound, 6-footer, peers steadily under heavy brows which match his black hair. He is as tanned as a lineman and walks with an athlete's easy swing. His firm jaw fits a man who came up from the ranks.

The two men share one characteristic. Both are essentially railroad operators, chary of speeches, shy of publicity. The announcement of their new jobs, made to newspapermen after a meeting of directors, found both men missing.

Schenck Resigns As Film Firm Head, Dow-Jones Reports

New York, April 30 (AP).—Dow-Jones, Financial News Service, reported today that Joseph M. Schenck, recently convicted of income-tax evasion, had resigned as chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox Films.

At the movie company offices, a spokesman said "we don't know whether he has resigned or not. There is no statement by the company."

Variety, amusement world trade journal, also reported Schenck's resignation and said Schenck had been off the company's pay roll at his own request since shortly before the start of his income-tax evasion trial.

The next regular meeting of the Twentieth Century-Fox board is set for May 15.

Cotton Futures

New York, April 30 (AP).—Cotton futures forged into new peaks for the season today under bullish interpretation of the passage by the House of Representatives in Washington of legislation calling for 75 per cent of parity loans. Final prices were 10 to 30 points higher, or slightly under the day's tops.

Buying orders came from all interested sources and hedging and near month liquidation supplied most of the offerings.

Active interest in cotton futures was also stimulated by the biggest day's business in Worth Street in six to eight weeks. At a late hour, traders estimated print cloth volume would attain a volume close to 15,000,000 yards. Goods moved well for delivery as late as October.

Norfolk Southern Railroad Sold For $2,000,100

Norfolk, Va., April 30 (AP).—The properties of the Norfolk Southern Railroad Co., in receivership since 1932, were sold today to Carroll M. Shanks, reorganization manager of the new company which will operate the line, for $2,000,100.

The sale was consummated on the steps of the Princess Anne County Courthouse today under an order authorizing a foreclosure sale entered through the Federal District Court by Col. W. B. Rodman, special master, and confirmed by Judge Luther B. Way.

Morris S. Hawkins will be the president of the new company. The names of those who will serve with him as officers have not been announced yet. Hawkins has acted as coreceiver for the road with L. H. Windholtz. Nine separate parcels were sold individually, all of which were bid in by Shanks.

Trade Group Clarifies Status of Members

New York, April 30 (AP).— A spokesman for the Edison Electric Institute, trade organization, said today that utilities otherwise outside SEC jurisdiction would so remain despite membership in that organization.

Two of the 200 private utilities members of the institute, Consolidated Edison Company of New York and Boston Edison Co., resigned after the institute was required to register March 14 with the SEC as a service organization.

Both Consolidated Edison and Boston Edison are intrastate utilities, not considered subject to the SEC.

Cities Service Head Sees Outlook Better

Dover, Del., April 29 (AP).—W. Alton Jones, president of the Cities Service Co., told a stockholders' meeting yesterday that prospects for business in the second quarter of 1941 were better than the first three months of the year.

Negotiations are under way to salvage the company's property in Mexico, he said, adding that regardless of the outcome, the company stands to lose nothing on its book accounts as a reserve has been set up.

Holdings in occupied countries are negligible, he explained, and holdings in England were disposed of before the war. In Canada, he said, the company's properties are functioning and in good order.

Jones Offers RFC Resources To Facilitate Utility Financing

By the Associated Press

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones yesterday offered the vast finances of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to facilitate competitive financing of the utility industry.

Jones said at a press conference that he "agreed heartily" with a recent rule of the Securities Commission which will require competitive bidding for utility financing begnnng May 7.

He declared that the RFC did not intend to compete with the banks for utility financing but was willing to cooperate, particularly when the amount involved may be too large for the banks to handle without RFC participation. A proposed $120,000,000 financing of the Columbia Gas & Electric Co., Jones said, may be one instance when RFC help may be needed.

Asked whether the RFC interest was to assure low interest rates in utility financing, Jones replied, "No, our interest is fair rates and on terms the borrowers can meet."

He added that there was nothing new about the RFC's position, saying that "we have been offering to help finance the utilities ever since the Tennessee Valley Authority was started, but the utilities haven't needed much of our help."

D. C. Delegates To Attend Area Loan Sessions

More than 50 Washington building and loan officials will attend the meeting of the Southeastern Group, United States Savings and Loan League, in Baltimore on May 15 and 16. William N. Payne, jr., president of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, will serve as official host.

Meanwhile, members of the local league yesterday heard Frank Harding outline steps to cooperate with the sale of defense savings bonds and stamps. A. M. McLachlen, president of the District Bankers Association, also addressed the luncheon meeting in the Raleigh Hotel and told of the banks' plans to handle the defense securities' sale.

President Payne appointed an outing committee for the annual field day of the local league as follows: Chapin Bauman, Carl J. Bergmann, J. J. Kolb, W. H. Blanz and Edward Hotze. The affair will take place June 18 at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Rubber Shortage Unlikely

CONSUMPTION of 66,821 long tons of crude rubber in March was the largest reported for any month in the industry's history. It was the third successive month in which domestic use of rubber exceeded 60,000 tons. Net imports totaled 86,823 long tons, the second largest monthly receipts on record. As a result, stocks of crude rubber rose some 20,000 tons to 373,600 on March 31, of which 163,600 tons were held as Government reserves. Total holdings, together with the 140,200 tons afloat to this country, represent the equivalent of 8.3 months' supply, at the first quarter consumption rate. If the recent rate of accumulation can be continued through the year, we will be fairly well situated as regards supplies of this strategic materials.

Gasoline Prices Improving

THE 50-CITY AVERAGE of retail gasoline prices, excluding taxes, rose to 12.42 cents a gallon on April 1 from 12.27 cents on March 1, an increase of 1.22 per cent. Although it was the fourth advance in as many months, it did not get the average back to the year-earlier level, when the figure was 13.17 cents. However, the recent general increase has come since the end of March, and if current higher levels are maintained, the May 1 figure may show a year-to-year gain for the first time since April, 1941. Last year the average declined from 13.17 cents on April 1 to 12.91 cents on May 1.

D. C. Clearings Set New Peak During March

Records toppled as the Washington Clearing House Association yesterday revealed that April check transactions totaled $147,871,745 and for the first four months aggregated $535,615,180.

The month's figure was the highest on record and $32,291,355 more than that recorded in April, 1940.

The four-month total, likewise, was the best on record for a similar period and was $109,460,508 more than the corresponding 1940 period.

Bank clearings are considered a sensitive barometer of business conditions and the successive monthly records here indicate new records in various trade fields.

Figures for the first four months compare as follows:

	1941	1940
January	$132,187,282	$107,137,093
February	118,571,597	93,153,189
March	136,984,555	110,284,000
April	147,871,745	115,580,390

Big Board Sales Shrink in March

New York, April 30 (AP).—New York Stock Exchange sales rose to 11,177,940 shares in April from 10,124,024 shares in March but were less than half of the 26,695,690 share turnover in April, 1940, the Stock Exchange announced today.

The April business was the best since January when the transfers aggregated 13,312,960 shares.

In contrast, bond sales on the "Big Board" were the lowest since February, at $209,509,600, par value, compared with $214,382,000 in March and $165,116,000 in April last year.

Commodities Take Speculative Limelight With Brisk Rise; Stock Market Slides

New York, April 30.—Wall Street traders let stocks slide today and turned to commodities, shoving the futures prices of many farm products well ahead. Leading shares declined small fractions to three points, with more than 50 per cent of the traded stocks on the downside.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks lost 0.4 of a point at 39.2. Transactions totaled 409,350 shares, compared with 511,990 yesterday.

Some commentators took the attitude that the decline was a "technical leveling off" of prices which recently had exhibited strength. They pointed out that more or less violent fluctuations were likely with "thin" markets.

Contributing to stock trading timidity was the difficulty of predicting future corporation earnings in the face of proposals for increased taxation.

However, operators viewed a new Congressional bill for increased governmental farm aid as likely to assist commodities, and quotations steadily advanced throughout the session for such products as cottonseed oil, hides, rubber and cocoa.

Cotton ended 80 cents to $1 a bale above yesterday's late rate. Only grains were weak, with wheat at Chicago unchanged to ⅜ cent a bushel down and corn ¼ to ½ cents off.

Among the few advancing share leaders was United Aircraft, which stayed ahead all day largely as a result of its first-quarter earnings and shipments statement and a $2 dividend.

U. S. Steel's favorable first quarter report, on the other hand, proved of no market support and this stock dropped 1⅛ points. Other prominent stocks on the downside included Youngstown, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas, Glenn Martin, International Nickel, Westinghouse, Du-Pont, Eastman, Santa Fe and Chesapeak & Ohio.

American Telephone lost three points, reaching a new 1941 low. Both American Airlines and Eastern Airlines dipped more than three points.

In the Curb, where 79,000 shares were exchanged compared with 75,000 yesterday, issues moving lower included Aluminum Co. of America, American Potash & Chemical, New England Telephone and Pennsylvania Central Airlines.

Republic Steel Reported Hard-Hit By Coal Shortage

Cleveland, April 30 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation lost about 100,000 tons of pig iron production as a result of the 28-day shutdown just ended in the Appalachian coal fields, Chairman Tom Girdler declared today.

This is the equivalent of about 100,000 tons of steel ingots, he pointed out.

Republic's operating rate has dropped from more than 100 percent of its previous peak to approximately 87 per cent as a result of the coal mining stoppage, and it was estimated 2½ weeks would be required to bring by-product coke ovens up to 100 per cent operations from the present 80 per cent rate.

Girdler said a "serious by-product" of the coal shutdown was the increase in the amount of steel scrap required to keep steel furnaces in operation in the absence of molten iron.

"Republci alone consumed about 20,000 tons of steel scrap over and above normal consumption," he said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 30 (AP).—Enthusiastic buying at the start of trading pulled wheat prices as much as 1⅝ cents a bushel higher today, but liquidation which followed quickly drove prices to yesterday's closing levels.

The trade was excited briefly at the news that the House of Representatives had passed the 75 per cent of parity loan bill and for a few minutes the wheat was a beehive of activity. Deferred deliveries were affected by the advance, with September contracts up 91¼ cents, a net advance of 1⅝ cents.

At the close wheat had lost all its earlier gains and was unchanged to ⅜ cent below yesterday's close, May 91⅛@91, July 89⅜@89¼; corn was ¾-⅛ down, May 68¼, July 68⅝; oats ⅛-⅜ off; rye ⅝-1⅝ declined, and lard 2-5 off.

The May delivery, not affected by the new legislation which yet has to weather the legislative storms in the Senate, responded a little to the news, but at 92 cents started falling off. This is the level at which wheat growers recently have started redeeming loans and pouring their wheat on the open market.

The 75 per cent of parity plan calls for loans of 75 per cent of the parity price on wheat, which had been set at $1.13 a bushel. This would make the loan available 85 cents. Last year the loan was 64 cents, approximately 57 per cent of parity. At that price traders figured that wheat had to sell around 81 cents a bushel in Chicago before it was profitable for growers to redeem their wheat and offer it on the market.

On that basis, growers borrowing 85 cents next year would have to get at least $1.02 in Chicago to make enough profit to warrant redemption of their loans.

Europe's Import Dependency Seen Hampering 'New Order'

By the Associated Press

New York, April 30.—The National Industrial Conference Board, private research organization, reported today after survey that despite German domination of most of Europe and resultant leveling of trade barriers, the continent would be hard pressed to overcome deficiencies in foodstuffs and raw materials.

The board reported that before the war only seven nations, excluding Russian-controlled countries, were self-sufficient in food. Shortages of foodstuffs, raw textiles, fuel products, metals, rubber, tobacco and fertilizers may hamper the Nazi "new order," the board said.

Its survey showed that pre-war continental Europe took two-fifths of the total exports of Argentina, Brazil and Egypt, a third of Chile's and a quarter of the exports of the Dutch East Indies, the United Kingdom, Costa Rica and the United States, its imports totaling about 25 per cent of the world total.

The N. I. C. B. said Dr. Walther Funk, Reich Minister of Economics, had been commissioned to plan economic reconstruction of Germany and Europe after the war.

"Dr. Funk's plans apparently will provide for the economic organization of Europe on regional principles, with the greater German Reich the dominating political, economic and financial center," it reported.

"Prior to the present war, however, the continent was far from self-sufficient. These deficiencies are not likely to be easily overcome."

Guild Quits Council After Charges It Is Communist Led

The Washington Newspaper Guild voted last night to withdraw from the District Industrial Union Council, city-wide representative body of C. I. O. affiliates. The action, which followed charges of Communist domination of the council, does not affect guild standing in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Dillard Stokes and Barney B. Taylor, of The Post; William W. Rodgers, Newspaper Information Service, and Joseph A. Loftus, of the Associated Press, were elected delegates to the guild national convention in Detroit June 23. Samuel Shaffer, of the Times-Herald, was name to an executive committee vacancy.

The guild voted unanimously for a resolution condemning the Vinson bill, which would freeze both closed and open shops and set a cooling-off period before a strike could be called.

Wallace Urges Overtime to End Defense Strikes

New York, April 30 (U.P.).—Vice President Wallace tonight asserted the American people have a right to demand that labor and management settle their differences "with promptness and good will."

"There is as great patriotism in working overtime to settle a defense industry strike as in working overtime to rivet the wing of a fighting plane," he told the New York Young Democratic Club.

Describing modern war as "like the nightmare of a deadly disease," Wallace went on to say "much as we hate the choice, the issue of slavery or war may be forced upon us as it has been forced on others."

"When we win the war," he said, "as I am confident we can by producing to the limit, we shall be confronted with the problem of the peace."

He urged that foundations "of freedom, comradeship, good will and mutual service" be laid "so that in the world to come there can be a permanent peace in which no nation can cause fear of aggression."

Yale Prize Goes To Capital Youth As 'Best Student'

Robert G. Rhett, 3rd, 20, of 2220 Twentieth Street Northwest, yesterday was awarded the Yale University F. Wilder Bellamy, Jr., Memorial Prize, a cash award presented annually to the most outstanding student, the Associated Press reported.

Rhett was given the prize as the student best exemplifying "the qualities of enthusiasm and capacity for hard work in studies and athletics" for which Bellamy, who died in 1937, is remembered.

Before attending Yale, Rhett was a student at the Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va. His father, Robert G. Rhett, Jr., is an official in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Two Policemen Given Temporary Sergeant Ratings

To fill vacancies in the Police Department created when two men were called for military service, the Commissioners yesterday granted temporary grades of sergeant to Privates Shirley R. Collins and Thomas Slominski.

Collins will take the place of Sergt. James E. Dawn, who was granted leave April 21 to report for Army service. Slominski will fill the vacancy created when Sergt. Bert Sheldon was given the temporary rank of lieutenant in the absence of Lieut. John E. Fondahl, also away on military duty.

Private Earl Noble was promoted to sergeant to replace Sergt. John R. Hood, who died April 3.

Detroit Probes Sale of Unmarried Mothers' Babies

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 30.—Police disclosed today that they were investigating activities of a group of persons suspected of "buying and selling" babies of unmarried mothers.

A 47-year-old grandmother was arrested on a tentative charge of conspiracy to violate the State adoption laws and another woman was reported sought for questioning.

Lieut. Nell Coolidge, of the women's police division, said that unwed, expectant mothers apparently were given hospital care and sums of money in exchange for their babies, who then were "sold" to childless couples for amounts as high as $1,000.

The mothers, Lieut. Coolidge said, received an average of $50 for their babies.

Polite Way to Hang Up Still a Mystery

How to hang up a telephone politely on a long-winded chronic complainer was one question which stumped even telephone company experts at a "How to Use a Phone" demonstration at Police Headquarters yesterday.

And another problem which Maj. Ernest W. Brown has wondered about is how a station clerk can say "Good afternoon. This is the Second Precinct. Private O'Flaherty speaking" without wasting too much time.

It was agreed that "Yeah" is not the proper way to answer a telephone and, according to the experts, a person wastes less than one second giving his name when answering a call.

It seems there is no way to get rid of the long talker except by gentle persuasion, coupled with large amounts of hope.

Lewis Attacks Knudsen as 'Labor Baiter'

Harrisburg, Pa., April 30 (U.P.).—Former C. I. O. chieftain John L. Lewis described Defense Commissioner William S. Knudsen tonight as a labor-baiter "who is doing his country a disservice and who should be restrained or removed."

Lewis spoke at a testimonial dinner for Phillip Murray, C. I. O. president, of whom he said:

"I expect to support him when he is right and I expect to support him when he is wrong."

Lewis complained that there is no place in the Cabinet, the OPM or the War or other departments for true representatives of labor, and charged that labor's few representatives in Washington "do not represent labor in Government but only, Government in labor."

Lewis, who resigned presidency of the C. I. O. when Republican Candidate Wendell Willkie failed to be elected President, complained that Washington "is overrun with a horde of $1-a-year men who served corporations before the emergency and who will serve them after it."

New Directory For City Out With 36,936 More Listed

The 1941 Washington city directory came out yesterday with 36,936 more names than last year's, an increase which the publishers believe is the largest of its kind in the country's history.

President Roosevelt's listing jumped ahead nearly 100 pages. "Roosevelt, Franklin Delano (Eleanor), President of the United States, the White House" appears on page 1209. Last year it was on page 1122.

Six other Roosevelts also appear in the book, one a farmer, one a boilerworker, one a shoe repairer and three laborers.

The new directory has 2,309 pages and 484,768 names; the old, 2,155 pages and 477,832 names. The new classified section lists 765 kinds of enterprise.

First name is that of Arnold L. Aaberg, 36, of 3425 Oakwood Terrace Northwest, listed as a motorman. But, according to his wife, Aaberg becomes a typographical draftsman at the War College today after seven years with the Capital Transit Co. Last name is Albert J. Zyvoloski, 50, of Hyattsville, Md., clerk in the Adjutant General's Office.

Army Officer Gets License To Marry Ex-Wife

Maj. Carl Douglas Silverthorne, 42-year-old Army Cavalry officer attached to the War Department, yesterday applied in Frederick, Md., for a license to rewed his former wife, Mrs. Alice Carey Silverthorne, 31. They were divorced in Kansas last November 11.

Major Silverthorne lives at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel. Mrs. Silverthorne's address was given as Junction City, Kan. The ceremony will be performed Saturday by the Rev. Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, pastor of the Calvary Methodist Church, Silverthorne said.

During the World War Major Silverthorne served as a private and first sergeant in the Florida National Guard. Following the war he entered West Point, and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Cavalry upon graduation.

Axis Troops Still Stalled in Egypt As Storm Rages On

Cairo, April 30 (AP).—German-Italian forces invading Egypt still are stalled in the desert vicinity of Salum, constantly harassed by the British and by a continuing sandstorm which has cut visibility to less than 30 feet, informed British sources declared tonight.

It was disclosed also that the fleet recently shelled Axis troop concentrations around Bardia and Tobruk. The British garrison at Tobruk, 80 miles inside Libya, continued to hang on.

The R. A. F. told of heavy raids Monday night on Benina and Derna airdromes and Bengasi Harbor, all in Libya.

On the Ethiopian front, the clean-up of the remaining Italian forces was reported progressing so that Emperor Haile Selassie was expected to make a triumphal entry into conquered Addis Ababa on Friday, May 2, exactly five years from the day he was forced to flee his capital before the Italians.

Nazis Executed 85,000 Infirm, Article Says

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, April 30.—The May 5 issue of the New Republic, on sale today, carries an article by Michael Straight, its Washington editor, asserting that in September, October and November of 1940 the Gestapo executed 85,000 blind, aged or incurably ill persons in Germany because they were unable to contribute to the German war effort.

"They were put to death as casually as the S. P. C. A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) chlorforms old and helpless dogs," the article says.

U. S. Gets 'Answer' To Dive Bombers

Baltimore, April 30 (AP).—Nine new antiaircraft guns—firing 2-pound shells in machine-gun fashion and described as "one answer to dive-bombers"—were accepted today by the United States Army Ordnance Department.

The rubber-tired, highly mobile gun carriages rolled off the assembly lines of the Bartlett Hayward Division of the Koppers Co., which holds a $13,500,000 contract for the gun mounts.

The new gun fires about 150 2-pound (37-millimeter) shells a minute, and has an approximate range of about 3,000 yards in vertical firing position. It can be put into action "in less than one minute," said Maj. D. N. Hauseman, executive officer of the Army's Philadelphia District, Ordnance Department.

10-Month Spending Of U. S. Reaches $10,006,063,623

With two months of the fiscal year yet to go, Federal expenditures have reached $10,006,063,623, more than has been spent in any fiscal year since the World War.

Treasury officials said yesterday this meant that the Government probably would reach its budgetary goal of $13,300,000 by June 30, establishing a record for peacetime spending.

Despite a slow start in the early months of the fiscal year, defense expenditures are up to $4,355,391,122, more than tripling similar spending in the corresponding ten-month portion of the preceding year.

The defense total also exceeded the deficit—also at a record high—of $4,087,187,642.

It's quite probable that Lee Little, who used to be WJSV's program director up till 1936 and who's now right-hand man for Prof. Quiz, is something of a trial for Pullman conductors.

For the versatile Mr. Lee, who produces the Thursday CBS radio show, lines up the contestants, arranges for the awards, and pinch-hits as master of ceremonies when bad weather prevents Bob Trout from flying from New York to wherever the show happens to be, has taken up photography in a big way.

Which would be nothing very unusual if it weren't for the fact that Mr. Little spends most of his time on Pullmans. When the Professor's show goes on in Army camps, as it has been doing for the past few weeks, Lee records the scenes with his camera. Then, at night, as the Quiz party dashes around the country, Lee gets out his bottle of hypos, fixitives and what have you and develops the prints in an improvised dark room on the train. He has his own special clothes line and pins to hang up the films. And then the following morning he prints them. All of which must seem pretty weird to the other passengers, not to mention that servant of the people, the porter.

Opening lead: 6 ♡.

Her partner was James Holton, of Brooklyn; the hand occurred at the Winter Nationals. Here is what he says of the bidding:

"Mrs. Neuwirth, believing that I might pass her fourth-hand opening, made a gambling two-bid in hearts, hoping we might play the hand at four—never six. Now Mr. Holton got the bit in his teeth and refused to pass.

"Mrs. Neuwirth played the hand extremely well, stripping South of his spades, diamonds, and then on the ninth trick threw in with his good heart. He was 'fixed' and had to lead away from his club king, so a gambling six bid came "home" for top."

A low heart was led and declarer won the king with her ace. She cashed the ace and king of spades, trumped a spade and entered her hand with the queen of hearts. Next came a diamond to the ace, followed by the diamond king, and a diamond was trumped. Mrs. Neuwirth now put South in with a heart lead to his good jack. South existed with a low club; declarer played dummy's queen, which held, and won the remaining tricks with the ace of clubs and two hearts. She lost only a trump trick, winning six hearts.

Mexico Pays U. S. Oil Firm For Seized Land

New York, April 30 (AP).—The Consolidated Oil Corporation reported today that Mexico had paid $4,000,000 under an agreement that settled the company's claims arising from expropriation of oil properties March 18, 1938.

Under terms of the two and one-half-year agreement signed in May, 1940, an additional $4,500,000 will be paid by Mexico. The cash payments are separate from Consolidated's agreement to purchase 20,000,000 barrels of Mexican oil at the rate of 5,000,000 barrels annually.

Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Consolidated executive committee, said in a statement that "all the terms of the contract have been scrupulously complied with."

Claims of the Royal Dutch interests of Great Britain and the Netherlands, and Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), have not been settled.

29,000 British Killed By Nazi Air Raids

London, April 30 (INS).—Air raid casualties in Britain up to the end of March amounted to nearly 29,000 killed and 40,000 injured, Minister of Health Ernest Brown reported tonight in a nation-wide broadcast.

Ex-Detroit Mayor Fined $10,500 In Bank Fraud

Detroit, April 30 (AP).—Former Mayor Richard W. Reading, of Detroit, who pleaded guilty to a Federal charge of fraud, was fined $10,500 and given a suspended 18-month prison sentence today by United States District Judge Frank A. Pickard.

He was placed on probation for three years.

Indicted by a Federal grand jury, Reading pleaded guilty last December 13 to making a false statement in an attempt to scale down a $16,000 claim against him by B. C. Schram, receiver for the First National Bank, Detroit, in October, 1937.

The Government charged that Reading made a sworn affidavit that he had only $100 in cash, at a time when he had $30,000 in a safety deposit box. A perjury count in the indictment was dropped when the former mayor pleaded guilty to other parts of the bill.
